

SHERIFF IS SENT AFTER VENIREMEN FROM UNION CITY

To Try Eight Reelfoot Night
Riders Charged With Rankin Murder.

Scenes Around Court House
Before Trial.

STORIES OF WILD CONDUCT

Union City, Tenn., Dec. 15.—When court convened this morning the sheriff was handed a list of 300 men to have present tomorrow morning from which to choose jurors to try eight men charged with the murder of Capt. Quentin Rankin at Reelfoot lake. The defendants are: T. D. Burton, Fred Pinon, Sam Applewhite, Garrett Johnson, Burt Morris, Arthur Clear, Roy Ransom and Bob Huffman.

R. Z. Taylor, who escaped when Rankin was killed, will be the first witness. The grand jury continues its investigation.

Scenes at the Trials.

Union City, Tenn., Dec. 15.—Clad in rough homespun, with ragged trousers tucked deep into cowskin boots, innocent of polish, with straggling beards and huge slouch hats, but always with the inevitable long-barreled rifle or big pistol in plain view, the denizens of the Reelfoot district are assembled in this quaint little town for the opening scenes of the night rider trials.

They are friends and relatives of the men who are held under military guard over at the barracks. They ignore the townspeople, or glance at them with scorn. When they meet one another a silent nod or a whispered word is all that passes between them. Silently and singly they wander through the streets or stand for hours outside the barracks, gazing curiously up at the windows of the room above in which their friends are held incommunicado. Sometimes they approach the trim young sentries on guard below, taking careful inventory of the glistening bayonets and businesslike rifles.

Grown Up Children.

They feel keenly this trouble, do these rough but simple grown-up children of the Tennessee mountains. They believe they are being persecuted and that the entire world is against them. Old Tom Johnson, who, the state says, was the first leader of the band, but who was deposed because his immense stature and mutilated hand made him an easy victim of identification, expresses the belief of them all when he says:

"It's like this heah, stranger. God he put them red hills up theah. An' He put some of us pooh folks that He didn't have no room for up theah, too. An' then He saw that we couldn't make a livin' farmin', so He ordered an earthquake, an' the earthquake left a big hole. Next He filled the hole with water and put fish in it. Then He knew we could make a livin' between farmin' and fishin'. But along comes these rick men, who don't have to make no livin', an' they tell us all that we must not fish in the lake any more, 'cause they owns the lake an' the fish God put theah foah us. It just naturally ain't right, stranger—it ain't no justice."

Went Too Far.

This is the night riders' view, and there are many who sympathize with them. But, like all movements of the kind, the primary object was forgotten and the organization began to be used to vent personal spite or members, and to attempt to regulate the most private and intimate affairs of everybody for a hundred miles around.

For instance, merchants whose total sales did not exceed $2 a day were notified that they must sell goods at cost plus 10 per cent. Tobacco of farms were ordered to pay no money rent but to insist on working the ground on shares. Growers of grain or tobacco were ordered to plant only so many acres of soil. Landlords were notified not to lease their property for cash rents.

A woman who had left her drunken husband was ordered to return to him, and when she refused she was taken to the woods, stripped, tied to a tree and lashed with a cat-o'-nine-tails until her back and shoulders were one big lacerated wound. Then one woman, fond of pretty clothing was told to cease to wear it. And in every case, a refusal to comply instantly, was followed by a visit from the fearsome black masked crew, a swift silent hopeless struggle, a rapid ride to the depths of the lone some forest and to an awful whipping on bare flesh.

For nearly two years these black-masked terrorists of the wilderness rode nightly. For nearly two years

NEW BISHOP INSTALLED.

Rockford, Ill., Dec. 15.—Bishop Peter Muldoon was installed the first Catholic bishop of the Rockford diocese. A thousand prominent clergy and laity participated in the ceremony. Eight hundred accompanied him from Chicago. At the Chicago farewell a certified check for $37,000 was given Bishop Muldoon.

More Breathitt Trouble

Jackson, Ky., Dec. 15. (Special.)—Warrants were issued for Ed Callahan and ten followers, charging them with shooting Rand Sebastian, who, Callahan claimed, attacked his house. Sebastian men say they were ambushed by Callahan.

K. C. Returns

After a ride on a freight train the degree team of the Knights of Columbus returned this morning from Owensboro and Morganfield, where classes were initiated. The members of the team had an enjoyable time on the trip, but in order to reach Paducah this morning a ride on a freight train was necessary.

King Edward's Health Failing.

London, Dec. 15.—It was learned on unquestionable authority that King Edward is seriously ill. Members of the royal family and attending physicians are greatly worried. Reassuring bulletins are given out but it is acknowledged that the time is approaching when the truth must be told. Edward realizes his condition and is preparing to seek a cure in a southern resort.

GOSPEL MISSION BAPTISTS MEET AT FULTON TODAY

Fulton, Ky., Dec. 15. (Special.)—The general association of Gospel Mission Baptist churches convened here this morning at the Central Baptist church, with a large representation from all sections of the country. The Rev. B. H. Kemmerer, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., preached the opening sermon this morning. The temporary organization was Dr. B. M. Bogard, of Little Rock, Ark., president; and the Rev. William Barker, of Ewing, Ill., secretary.

This association is composed of Baptist churches, which withdrew two years ago from the Southern Baptist convention as far as foreign mission work is concerned, and organized this association at Texarkana, Texas. It has missionaries in Syria, Persia and Mexico.

Many Baptist ministers connected with the Southern Baptist convention were present as onlookers. Among them is the Rev. M. E. Dodd, of the First church, Paducah.

Otis Blick Here.

Clad in his uniform and with his rifle Otis Blick, a confessed night rider, passed through Paducah en route this morning from Eddyville to Benton, where he will testify in the night rider trials. Blick, since his confessions, has served in the state guards. He has been on duty at Eddyville most of the time.

I. C. Pay Car.

Tomorrow morning the pay car of the Illinois Central railroad will arrive in Paducah and pay off the employees. The car will arrive on the Cairo train at 7:45 o'clock and remain here until Thursday morning. All of the retail stores will remain open on evenings and Christmas shopping is expected to have an impetus by the railroad trade.

ANOTHER VESSEL OF VENEZUELA IS CAUGHT BY DUTCH

Will Be Held as Prize in Hope
Of Stirring Up the Revolutionists.

It is Reported That Venezuelans Are Loyal.

GERMANS APPLAUD CASTRO.

London, Dec. 15.—Dispatches from The Hague announce that another Venezuelan coast guard ship, Mayo, was captured. The vessel is held as a prize. Messages state that Holland expects by such methods to incite a Venezuelan revolution, which will overthrow Castro.

Venezuelan Demonstration.

Caracas, Venezuela, Dec. 15.—The news that the republic had been placed in a state of national defense against Holland ran through the city like wildfire, and in a few moments there was an enormous crowd in front of the yellow house, the executive mansion, to greet Acting President Gomez.

As Gomez made his way across the plaza to the yellow house he was received with enthusiasm. The yellow house was crowded with a number of distinguished citizens of Caracas. Speeches were made demanding that all political prisoners be set at liberty and that the existing government monopolies be abolished.

The threatened danger from without had a double effect on the people, and they demanded measures of protection, but at the same time insisted upon the termination of one of the most unpopular courses of the Castro administration, the maintenance of government monopolies in the necessities of life.

Foreign Minister Paul replied in behalf of the acting president. He exhorted the people to trust Gomez to solve the difficult problem confronting Venezuela today and help him carry his burden of tremendous responsibility.

The hostile demonstration at the offices of the El Constitucional is evidence of the unpopularity of Castro.

Germans Cheer Castro.

Berlin, Dec. 15.—President Castro, of Venezuela, and party arrived here last evening. The train was awaited by a dense crowd of people who had gathered out of curiosity. So precautions had been taken to prevent the public from crowding the platforms and as the train steamed into the depot the president was greeted with shouts of "Long Live Castro." There was a general lifting of hats and much cheering.

The Venezuelan charge d'affaires at Berlin, Senor Veloz-Gotliche, and Senor Nached, consul at Berlin, and other eminent Venezuelans, had great difficulty in making their way to the entrance of the car where Castro was standing waiting to descend. As soon as the train came to a standstill Castro stepped out quickly and cordially embraced Veloz and Nached. The consul read a short address of welcome and the president apparently was about to reply when another train dashed in on the opposite platform with such a deafening noise that his effort to speak was in vain.

Castro's Wife Cheered.

Further cheering broke out as the president's wife and other members of his party descended the saloon steps. They then left the station and found, drawn up outside, several motor cars which were elaborately decorated with Venezuelan flags. In these they drove to the hotel Esplanade, followed by a number of private motor cars and cabs containing newspaper men and others. The corridor of the hotel was crowded when they arrived and a band struck up the Venezuelan hymn as Castro, with his wife, entered. The president declined to be interviewed.

Members of Castro's suite stated that the president had sent a dispatch to Emperor William from Herbesthal on the German frontier, stating that he had come to Germany for medical treatment and expressing profound homage to his majesty. According to the same authority, when he learned the news of the capture of the Venezuelan vessel by the Dutch cruiser Gelderland he was not greatly affected, merely remarking that there was no such vessel in the Venezuelan service.

While at Cologne the president and party visited the Cathedral and other places of interest and enjoyed an automobile trip along the shore of the Rhine. He displayed the greatest interest in the industrial region of Westphalia.

Defeated Candidates in Primary in Calloway County Bring Suit to Set Aside Election as Illegal

Old Law and Order-Night
Rider Controversy Gets Into Court at Murray--Grand Jury and Recount Unavailing

Murray, Ky., Dec. 15.—(Special.)—Calloway county's primary fight was not finished by a recount of votes, but suit has been filed in circuit court against the successful candidates and the former county committeemen to set aside the primary on the ground of illegal voting and failure to call the primary forty days before the date set.

The plaintiffs are D. J. Alexander, who was defeated for county judge by E. P. Phillips; J. K. Mathoney, who was defeated for circuit clerk by Joseph Lancaster, and W. A. Patterson, who was defeated by Walter Holland for sheriff. A recount of the votes resulted in increasing the majorities of the successful candidates, and a grand jury investigation into alleged participation by Republicans in West Murray precinct resulted in no indictments. A cousin of County Judge Wells was presented on a charge of contempt based on the statement of a juror, tenant of a defeated candidate, that Wells had approached him and advised him not to vote indictments.

The truth is, it seems, that there was a combination between Republicans and law and order Democrats to support the ticket, which won. Not all the defeated candidates were night rider sympathizers, but as in the case of the sheriff, Walter Holland was opposed by night riders because he had been so active in prosecuting them.

The Republicans have no show in a general election in Calloway, and in order to insure the success of the law and order ticket, they paired off with Democrats in the general election, voting for Bryan as to qualify for the primary. The primary result was close, and Judge Cook instructed the grand jury to take action whenever it found that a Republican had voted in the primary. Nothing came of this attempt and then a recount was held.

Playing Poker Sunday.

About 21 young fellows hiked below the incline on the river bank Sunday afternoon and began an interesting game of poker. Detective Lige Cross flushed the players, but they proved good runners. Yesterday afternoon Detectives Cross and Bailey and Patrolman Owen arrested Willis Roberts, Elmer Stone, Ben Floyd, Alfred McClure and Charles M. Canahan, all charged with gaming. The cops are after the remainder of the players.

LONE OAK CHURCH TO BE DEDICATED ON NEXT SUNDAY

The Lone Oak Methodist church will be dedicated Sunday, when the first service will be held in the afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. J. W. Blackard, presiding elder of the Paducah district will preach the dedicatory sermon, but he will be assisted by the pastor, the Rev. W. J. Naylor, and the Rev. G. T. Sullivan and the Rev. G. W. Banks. The new church has been under construction since June, and is a neat building of concrete and is modern in every respect. The opera chairs will not arrive until about January 1, but seats will be installed temporarily.

MINE WORKERS ELECT.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 15.—Sufficient returns from election among United Mine Workers are received to show that John F. Walker, of Illinois, has defeated Tom Lewis for president. Walker carried Kansas and has a big lead in Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania. It is announced that William D. Ryan, secretary and treasurer of the Mine Workers, was appointed labor commissioner from the Illinois operators to settle the dispute with the miners.

HEALTH OFFICER TAKING STEPS TO STOP CONTAGION

The city health officer has made arrangements with Mr. F. E. Reidhead, general manager of the Paducah Traction company, to put notices in all the street cars warning passengers not to spit on the floors of the cars. The employees of the traction company are to report all such cases to the board of health and the board of health will carry out the law in the prosecution of the guilty ones. The law fixes the fine of from $1 to $5 for each offense. The board of health notified Supt. J. A. Carnegie, of the public schools this morning to have all the wood-work, the desks and the floors, washed with a good antiseptic solution during the Christmas holidays. The board of health is just taking a precaution to prevent the spread of any disease if any is among school children.

TOBACCO TRUST PROHIBITED BY FEDERAL COURT

New York, Dec. 15.—The federal court rendered a final decree, declaring the American Tobacco company an allied company of an illegal combination. They are enjoined from engaging in interstate trade in leaf tobacco or products.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 15. (Special.)—The governor will not appoint Dr. Board's successor until the new year. Judge Lawrence Anderson, of Graves county, is a hot tip for the place.

Smouldering Fire

Fire that has been smouldering in a saw dust pile at Sowell's mill on Meyer street, broke out this morning at 4:25 o'clock, and the private force was unable to cope with it. An alarm was turned in and fire companies Nos. 2 and 4 responded. Extra lines of hose were placed on end and the firemen checked the advance of the flames. The fire was smouldering several days, and probably will burn for weeks. The mill has men working on the fire, and a stream of water is kept going constantly. It did no damage to the mill or stock this morning.

MRS. HARGIS SAYS SHE WILL SPEND ALL TO SAVE SON

Danville, Ky., Dec. 15. (Special.)—Elmer Hill, the murderer of Maude Womack, was taken to Lexington from Monticello, on account of the fear of a mob.

Glanders at Fulton.

Fulton, Ky., Dec. 15. (Special.)—Glanders have broken out among the horses on Hays Prewitt's farm near Fulton.

NORTH CHRISTIAN COUNTY FARMERS ORGANIZE POOL

Will Sell Their Tobacco Loose
Leaf and They Denounce Association.

No Night Riders Among Their Number.

LYON COUNTY IS NEGOTIATING

Hopkinsville, Ky., Dec. 15.—(Special.)—North Christian farmers led in the revolt from the Planters' Protective association at a meeting, which filled the court house, last evening, when they organized the Farmers' Mutual Tobacco association, a "loose leaf pool." Former Sheriff Lem R. Davis was elected president, and a committee was appointed to complete arrangements for handling the tobacco. This does not mean the entire destruction of the association in Christian county, but the majority of the planters in the northern part are in the new organization.

They propose to handle their tobacco in Hopkinsville, if the people here are not afraid of night riders. Otherwise they will handle it through Paducah or Louisville. It is believed they will not be molested here. There are no night riders in this organization. They adopted resolutions to the effect that the association officers are running the business for their own profits and salaries and not for the farmers. They also declared they "would quit raising tobacco before they would commit murder and burn property."

It was proposed by some speakers that further parley be held with the Planters' Protective association, but the farmers evidently came with their minds made up and they would not move from their concerted course.

Lyon county planters in a movement, which is much larger than this and includes some men suspected of night rider sympathies, have appointed a committee to confer further with the association. Planters of Caldwell and Trigg county have not gone this far in their protest against association methods of handling tobacco.

Association Salaries.

Guthrie, Ky., Dec. 15.—Planters' Protective association officers announce the following schedule of salaries: President, $900; vice-president, $600; general manager, $5,000; secretary, $1,200; treasurer, $1,200; auditor, $1,800.

Jones' Condition Serious

Chances are about even for the recovery of George Jones, who was assaulted Sunday afternoon by Finley Climer with a scantlin. Jones has never recovered consciousness since the blow. His physicians believe that he will be able to pull through despite the seriousness of his wound.

MAYOR GETS JOKE ON VISITORS WHO OPPOSE LICENSE

The meeting of the general council in committee of the whole tonight promises to be interesting on account of the consideration of the license ordinance. Mayor Smith, who has figured out that he is sacrificing some $7,000 or $8,000 this year by being mayor, when he might be looking after accounts, is quite imperturbable, enjoying a new phase of human nature. His license also is raised.

This morning he was visited by a committee from the doctors, whose license is increased $10 the year in the ordinance. He had heard of the contemplated visit.

"There is considerable discussion of the license ordinance," was the mayor's greeting after the exchange of common civilities.

His visitors acquiesced unconditionally. "Well, there is some justice in it," went on the mayor rapidly. "I think the doctors will have to pay too much."

His visitors caught their breath hard, but managed to gasp that he had hit the very purpose of their call. "Yes, sir," went on the mayor, never noticing their expressions. "Eighty-three and a third cents a month is too much for the doctors of Paducah to pay. They can't afford it. Now, if it was 40 cents a month, it might come within their means; but $3 1/3 cents a month is a terrible burden for a doctor, I think." "Oh, go to grass!" exclaimed one of his visitors. "You knew what we were coming here for."

IN MEMORY OF LINCOLN

Senator Dick Introduced a Resolution.

Recommends Celebration of Emancipator's Birthday—Americans at Home and Abroad.

TAKES PLACE FEBRUARY 12

Washington, Dec. 15.—Senator Dick, of Ohio, introduced in the senate a resolution recommending to Americans at home and abroad the celebration of Lincoln's birthday, February 12, in a fitting manner. The senator believes that the one hundredth anniversary should be especially observed with appropriate ceremonies, not only by congress, but by all states, municipalities and the people generally. Senator Dick's resolution is as follows:

"Resolved, That the twelfth day of February, 1909, be set apart for a joint session of the two houses of congress, to be assembled to pay tribute to Abraham Lincoln, the great emancipator, to listen to an appropriate address upon the life, character, genius, patriotism and public services of the statesman who guided safely the ship of state through its greatest peril, and to otherwise commemorate in fitting manner his invaluable services to this nation.

Americans at Home and Abroad. "Resolved, further, That we recommend that the American people, at home and abroad, the states and territories, and the District of Columbia, all municipalities and towns, all organized bodies of citizens, church as well as state; all associations, civil, military, patriotic, fraternal, scientific and social; labor and trade societies, chambers of commerce and boards of trade, and other civic, commercial and industrial bodies, and all others, set apart the centennial of the birth of Abraham Lincoln to do reverent honor to his memory.

"Resolved, further, That we recommend that at all places where people gather for public purposes addresses be made in eulogy of Lincoln, that the emancipation proclamation be read, his Gettysburg speech be repeated, and that wherever possible a short history of his life, his Gettysburg address and suitable excerpts from his addresses and correspondence be printed for circulation in pamphlets, magazines, periodicals and newspapers.

Incentive to Youth of Land. "Resolved, further, That inasmuch as his triumph over the adverse circumstances of early years should be incentive to the youth of the land, we recommend that on this day special and appropriate exercises be held in colleges, universities, academies, and schools, and all seats of learning, to teach the lesson of the life and achievements of this great exemplar of our American civilization.

"Resolved, further, That we recommend action looking to the erection in the city of Washington of a monument which shall be worthy of his great fame, his service to humanity and to his country, and fittingly commemorate the grandeur of character, the nobility of life and the epoch-making career of Abraham Lincoln."

Loss of Nature's Resources. "The waste of mineral products of the United States amounts to $1,000,000 per day in value. The waste of natural gas amounts to 1,000,000,000 cubic feet per day, or more than enough to light all the cities of the United States having more than 100,000 population."

These statements were made by Senator Flint, of California. Senator Flint called attention to the large waste of material and the large loss of life which characterize the mineral industries in all parts of the country, which he said was deplorable.

"The enormous waste in coal mining is equivalent to about one hundredth of the total product mined, or for the year 1907 about 240,000,000 tons," said Senator Flint, "with an entire waste of all mineral products approximating $1,000,000 per day, and with the mineral production of the United States during the past year amounting to $2,000,000,000, this waste is equivalent to more than one-sixth of the value of the total production."

Up Against Hard Proposition. The house committee of the District of Columbia finds itself up against a hard proposition in considering the question of prohibition for the city of Washington. An agreement was practically reached to leave the matter to the "voters" of the city. Now, it is discovered that there is great difference of opinion as to who should be allowed to vote, as about one-third of the city's population consists of negroes. The result is, that the liquor question is temporarily shelved to a secondary position, all of the discussion being over qualifications of voters.

Decrease in Receipts. Commissioner John G. Capers, of the internal revenue bureau, in his annual report states that for the last fiscal year there was a decrease in the receipts of $17,998,972, as compared with the previous year, and that for the first three months of the current year there has been a decrease of $7,262,238, as compared with the corresponding months of the last fiscal year.

The production of distilled grain spirits for the fiscal year 1908 was 126,989,740 tax gallons, which is a decrease of over 41,000,000 gallons, as compared with last year. This is accounted for by the commissioner to the prohibition movement, the high price of grain and the movement among distillers to curtail production.

Denatured Alcohol Falls Off. The total production of denatured alcohol during the year was 3,321,451 wine gallons, which is about 240,000 gallons less than for the previous year, and from reports received there does not appear to have been any very material increase in the quantity entering into general or agricultural use. This is partly accounted for by the high prices of distilling materials. The cost of production has not been sufficiently reduced. Mr. Capers says, to enable completely denatured alcohol to successfully compete with kerosene, gasoline or gas. Nevertheless, it is gradually growing in favor for fuel, light and power.

Under special regulations, an agricultural experiment distillery recently has been established in Washington by the department of agriculture upon its own premises. The purpose is to determine the spirit-producing capacity of various materials, and to provide for the instruction and training of representatives from state agricultural experiment stations in

FIRST WARD BALL

HELD IN CHICAGO LAST NIGHT
AT THE COLISEUM.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—With an attack on a newspaper photographer and the smashing of his camera as a prelude, the First ward ball, the annual revel presided over by Aldermen Cughlin and Kenna, was held in the Coliseum last night, all efforts of church people and reformers to prevent the holding of the ball having proved unsuccessful.

A large guard of police surrounded the building, extra precautions being taken because of the explosion of a dynamite bomb in the vicinity last night. Photographers were forbidden to attend the ball and the efforts of one to violate the rule resulted in an attack on him.
It was estimated that the receipts from the sale of tickets was almost $25,000, the sum, according to the regular custom, is to be used toward electing the alderman of the ward whose term expires next spring.

—The board of public works will meet in regular session this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the city hall. Only routine business will be before the board. Considerable time will be devoted to the preparation of the annual report of the board and of the different departments under the direction of the board.

A Christmas Opportunity

Over 2,000 Men's and Young Men's Suits and Overcoats Reduced 25%

A Great Price Reduction on All Broken Lines of Suits and Overcoats

It has always been the policy of this house in their advertising, as well as in all other ways, to give the public a clean, straightforward statement of all its dealings.

We now offer you as an Xmas opportunity, over two thousand Men's and Young Men's Fall and Winter Suits and Overcoats—broken lines—at a reduction of one-fourth off of the prices which have prevailed on these goods during the season.

We do not wish to convey the idea that all suits and overcoats have been reduced—only the broken lines—which are designated by a yellow tag attached thereto. The assortment contains all sizes and most them are ROXBORO and Hart, Schaffner & Marx makes, and you know what these labels means on a suit or overcoat.

This most certainly is an Xmas opportunity, coming as it does only eight days before Xmas.

The original price tickets remain on the merchandise and you may deduct therefrom this discount of 25 per cent.

These broken line price reductions are strictly cash

Daily Thought.
 "The ability to learn marks the limit of actual living."

John D. Rockefeller hurried to his dentist at Cleveland with the toothache Saturday. We thought the government had extracted John's teeth at the trust investigation.

E. L. Harriman, by a ruling of the United States supreme court, escapes answering questions put to him concerning Union and Southern Pacific stock transactions; but why did he wish to escape?

Ireland has 193,000 men over 70 years old ready to take advantage of Great Britain's old age pension, and if we understand the Irish temperament, all the rest of the inhabitants will go on living just as long as they can to get even with England.

President Roosevelt's suggestion that innocent negro soldiers be reinstated as soon as they testify to what they know about the Brownsville raid is calculated by its fairness to take all the life out of Senator Foraker's plea to reinstate soldiers, shielding comrades who shot into the homes of citizens of Brownsville. This country would be well protected by soldiers like that, wouldn't it?

How much the colored race deserves encouragement will be shown by the way the race responds to the call for the new colored institute in this state. The school will be practical in its nature. It is not expected that individual colored people will give much; but every one should contribute his mite and not be ashamed of it. The aggregate of mites is spelled might.

The argument will be advanced tonight perhaps that since the city is in such great straits the license for bucket shops should be reduced, so that they will come in and add $500 to the city's revenue. A bucket shop would take out of the city thousands of dollars owed to the merchants and they could better afford to pay that money into the city themselves.

THE PROBLEM BEFORE THE COUNCIL.
 More than once this fall The Sun has been compelled to protest against suggestions of extravagance from the other press of the city on account of the stress of the times. The city has been urged to undertake street and sewer extensions and wholesale sidewalk construction. The Sun argued that this is scarcely the time to talk of such work, especially under our iniquitous system of direct assessment and the exorbitant price exacted for such work in Paducah. Now, however, it is proposed to add to the obligation of the city and wipe out the interest breeding floating debt. On this subject The Sun said the members of the general council tonight should listen to all who wished to be heard on the subject, and if the speakers talk in behalf of Paducah their words should be carefully weighed. If justice is apparent, of course, the members will try to remedy it. But if the speakers have no concern for the welfare of Paducah in their suggestions, it is not the duty of councilmen and aldermen to heed the suggestions, providing there is no apparent injustice.

The principal increase is that of brewery agents, whom it is proposed to assess $500 this year. Whether the reasons justify the license or whether the license is too high, every man can judge for himself. It is the province neither of The Sun nor any other paper to attempt to dictate on this point. One might naturally expect some of the agents to endeavor to get their assessment reduced although we do not know that any of them are, and those who are profiting by the interest from the city might be expected, were they that character of men, to object to any means to wipe out the floating debt; but one would hardly have expected the paper, which has been demanding street and sewer extensions at the direct expenses of property owners, plus thirty per cent bonus for collecting it, to cry hard times when the city is trying to raise money to meet its current obligations and abolish an interest charge.

IN VENEZUELA.
 The test of national spirit is an attack from the outside. No matter how varied and antagonistic, the political or religious beliefs of the people of this country, or the unpopularity of the administration, should the nation be attacked, no one could imagine the people as a whole not rallying to the government. Venezuela, which has been the pawn of the wily Castro for years, has suffered humiliation at the hands of the Netherlands. It was expected that either the nation would be forced to terms by having its commerce effectively blocked, or that this move would precipitate a revolution. The opposite may be the effect. Mayhap, the Venezuelans will rally to the government.

We have little faith in Castro, and yet he has ruled those wild latins for a long time, and it seems he dared leave the country in the hands of subordinates. Whether he was fleeing, while yet he had time or is on diplomatic missions it is difficult to say. Much of the trouble arose over foreign concessions in Venezuela. Our own asphalt trust, which has been muting American municipalities, had a round with Castro. We didn't care much for that; for however bad Castro might be, he was not doing anything to the asphalt trust that the asphalt trust was not doing to us. If it happens that the Netherlands has awakened some Dutch in those South Americans we shall watch them fight it out for the feather weight championship with delight.

STANDARD GOES SKYWARD.
 Market Value of Stock Has Increased $320,000,000 in Year.
 New York, Dec. 15.—Standard Oil stock has increased $320,000,000 in market value in less than a year. It sold today at $710 a share, and a year ago touched $390. Of the increase in the market value, $40,000,000 has been made up in the past week since the principal witnesses finished their testimony in the Standard Oil investigation. Popular belief credits John D. Rockefeller personally with owning at least one-fourth of the capital stock and some estimates run as high as 40 per cent., so that his share in the advance is anywhere from $80,000,000 to $120,000,000.

The orderly entered again, announcing Stenovic. "Let him come in here," said the prince. His manner grew lighter, and the smile which had comforted Sophy remained on his face. Stenovic came in. His air was nervous, and he looked at the prince's three companions with a visible access of embarrassment. At a nod from the prince the orderly placed a chair for the general and withdrew. "The same matter we discussed last night, general?"

"There can be but one matter in the thoughts of all of us now, sir. Pardon me; I understood your royal highness would receive me alone." The prince gave a low laugh. "When we bargains, shouldn't one have witnesses?" In an instant Stenovic laid hold of the significant word. It made him forget his request for privacy. An eager light came into his eyes. "Bargains? You're ready now to—" "La nuit porte conseil." He drew a paper from the envelope, unfolded it and handed it across the table. "You remember that, a memorandum I sent to you three months ago in my capacity as commandant?"

Stenovic looked at the paper. "I remember, sir." "It's indorsed in your hand?" "Yes." "The indorsement runs, 'Impossible.' Rather curt, general?" "The note was for my private use, but your royal highness particularly pressed for the return of the document." "I did, and, after all, why use more words than necessary? One will still be enough, but not that one." "I'm not following you, sir," said Stenovic.

The prince leaned across the table to him. "In our conversation last night you asked me to do a very remarkable thing and to get this lady here"—he indicated Sophy—"to do it too. You remember? We were to think that at night, in the Street of the Fountain, in the light of the illuminations, Sergius Stefanovitch and Nikolas Stalfitz looked and sounded just the same. I didn't see my way to that, and I didn't think this lady would see hers. It seemed so difficult."

Stenovic was in a strain of close attention. The paper from the envelope crackled under the trembling of his hand. "Now, if we had such a memory as Lieutenant Rastatz is happy enough to possess," the prince pursued. "Or if Colonel Stalfitz had taken us into his confidence about his quarrel with Captain Mistitch! All that was not so last night. Consequently Captain Mistitch must be tried and shot instead of suffering some not very severe disciplinary punishment for brawling in the street and having a quarrel with his superior officer."

Stenovic marked every word and understood the implied offer. The offer was good enough. Stalfitz himself would not and could not ask that no notice whatever should be taken. The trifling nature of the punishment would in itself be a great victory. But the price? He was to hear that in a moment. "Sergius Stefanovitch—Nikolas Stalfitz! Which was it, general? It's only changing two words, yet what a difference it makes!" "The difference of peace tonight or—Stenovic waved his hand toward the city. But the prince interrupted him.

"He looked full at Stenovic. 'Never mind noxious, and the gen—that,' he said, 'er's eyes fell.'"

"That's not first in my mind or I should have left the matter where it rested last night. I was thinking of the difference to Captain Mistitch and perhaps to you, general."

He looked full at Stenovic, and the general's eyes fell. The prince pointed to the paper.

WASTE OF HUMAN LIFE DURING YEAR

Between 25,000 and 35,000 Deaths.
 Campaign for Cleaner Press is Instituted in New York City.

INTERNAL REVENUE RECORD

Washington, Dec. 15.—Between 30,000 and 35,000 deaths and 2,000,000 injured is the accident record in the United States during the past year among workmen, according to a bulletin on accidents issued by the bureau of labor. Of those employed in factories and work shops, it is stated that probably the most exposed class are the workers in iron and steel. Fatal accidents among electricians and electric linemen and coal miners are declared to be excessive, while railway trainmen were killed in the proportion of 7.46 deaths per 1,000 employees.

The bulletin declares that much that could be done for the protection of the workman is neglected, though many and far-reaching improvements have been introduced in factory practice during the last decade. It is pointed out that the possibilities for successful accident prevention have been clearly demonstrated in the experience of foreign countries. "Granting," the bulletin states, "that the underlying conditions in European countries are often quite different, and that many of our industrial accidents may be the result of ignorance, reckless indifference or carelessness, the fact remains that an immense amount of human life is wasted and a vast amount of injury is done to health and strength, with resulting physical impairment, which has a very considerable economic value to the nation as a whole."

It is insisted that it should not be impossible to save at least one-third, and perhaps one-half, by intelligent and rational methods of factory inspection.

For a Cleaner Press.
 New York, Dec. 15.—With the his finger across the table at the paper under Stenovic's hand. "I'm a liberal bargainer," he said, "and I offer you a good margin of profit. I'll change two words if you'll change one—for you against one for me! 'Sergius Stefanovitch' becomes 'Nikolas Stalfitz' if 'impossible' becomes 'immediate.'"

Stenovic gave one slight start, then leaned back in his chair and looked past the prince out of the window opposite to him. "Make that change, and we'll settle details afterward. I must have full guarantees. I must see the order sent and the money deposited in my name and at my disposal."

"This afternoon, sir?" "Wouldn't it be well to release Captain Mistitch from Suleiman's tower before tonight?"

"The money is difficult today." "The release will be impossible to-morrow."

Again Stenovic's eyes wandered to the window, and a silence followed. Perhaps he saw the big guns already in position, dominating the city. Perhaps he listened to the hum of voices which again began to swell in volume from the wall and from the quays. There are times when a man must buy the present with a mortgage on the future, however onerous the terms may be. It was danger against destruction. He put out his hand and took from Zerko a quill which the journalist was twiddling in his fingers. He made a scratch and a scribble on the paper which the prince had taken from the envelope.

"Impossible" has become "immediate," sir.

"And 'Sergius Stefanovitch' 'Nikolas Stalfitz,'" said the prince. He looked at Sophy for confirmation, and she softly clasped her hands.

The Internal Revenue.
 Washington, Dec. 15.—According to the report of Commissioner of Internal Revenue John G. Capers, submitted for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1908, Kentucky ranks third in the list of states in the payment of internal revenue taxes. Illinois is first, with $46,122,844. New York is second, with $30,359,597, and Kentucky's taxes were $26,874,585.

In 1907 the total production of distilled spirits was 174,712,218 gallons; in 1908, 123,889,563 gallons. In 1907 in round numbers, 136,100,000 gallons of tax-paid spirits were withdrawn; in 1908, 121,400,000. There had been a decrease in the amount of tobacco and snuff manufactured and an increase in the production of beer.

Decrease in Production.
 The decrease in the production of distilled spirits noted in the report is ascribed to the lack of demand for "high-proofed spirits" for rectification purposes, the prohibition movement, the high price of grain during the year, and the agreement entered into by many distillers to curtail the production. This decrease for the fiscal year ending June 30 last, as compared with the figures for the year 1907, was 41,584,173 gallons. The withdrawals on the payment of tax from bonded warehouses during the period from 1897 to 1907 increased approximately 100 per cent, but there was a decrease in the tax-paid withdrawals, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, of (14,327,472.3 tax gallons) between 1907 and 11 per cent.

Tobacco Production.
 The states of Missouri, North Carolina, Kentucky, Ohio and Virginia, in the order named, were the largest producers of both chewing and smoking tobacco, the quantity produced in Kentucky being 45,219,830 pounds.

The quantity of distilled spirits (126,989,740.1 gallons) produced from materials other than fruit and deposited in distillery warehouses or removed to denaturing warehouses direct from distillery rooms of distilleries during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1908, is less than the quantity so produced (168,572,913.2 gallons) during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1907, by 41,584,173.1 gallons.

IN SOCIAL CIRCLES

Red Men's Dance.

The entertainment committee of the Otega tribe, Red Men, will give a series of dances this winter in the Red Men's hall on North Fourth street. The first dance will be given tomorrow night.

Paducahans Met in California.

The San Bernardino (California) Daily Sun of December 5, in its "Social Notes," gives prominence to the following mention that is of wide interest here as all the parties are native Paducahans and especially popular ones:

"Richard Irving Scott, who is a member of the Louis James company, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar B. Jones at luncheon yesterday. Mr. Scott is a long time Kentucky friend of Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

"In the past last evening Mr. Scott had the role of the German, 'Herr Trumpfstrasse,' who appears in the entertaining fourth act of 'Peer Gynt.'

"On Thursday afternoon Mr. Scott was delegated by Mr. James to read before the student body of the Redlands High school, a paper on the life of Isaac and his 'Peer Gynt,' which Mr. James had prepared but was unable to present."

Attractive Program for O'Sullivan Recital.

The program for the piano recital to be given on Wednesday evening by Patrick O'Sullivan at the K. C. hall, is one that will distinctly appeal to all lovers of music. Mr. O'Sullivan will bring his own concert grand piano. He will play several of his own compositions among them some of the Irish Melodies that have proved so taking in his concert tours of the foreign cities. Mr. O'Sullivan's Celtic temperament makes another of his compositions for Wednesday evening, namely, "Vision," of especial power. He is a native of Louisville, but has resided 11 years in Berlin. The program is:

Momen's Musicals, in A flat—Schubert.
Mennetto—Schubert.
Sonata, op 26—Beethoven.
Vision—P. O'Sullivan.
Ballade, No. 3, op 47—Chopin.

Harmonies du Soir—Liszt.
Four Irish Melodies—P. O'Sullivan.
Mazurka—Liszt.
Rhapsodie, No. 12—Liszt.

Mr. Gilbert Appears Before Manuscript Society.

Mr. Harry Gilbert, of Paducah, who has recently located in New York, appeared Monday evening in New York city at the National Arts club as soloist and accompanist at the first concert of the season of the American Manuscript Society of America. Composers in manuscript of Messrs. Homer N. Bartlett, Harry M. Gilbert and James P. Dunn comprised the program and these representative musicians were all at the instrument for their respective compositions. Mr. Gilbert played at Scherzo and a waltz in A flat, and for his second number presented three songs, with Clarence Edward Pease, the New York tenor, as soloist, entitled: "O, Were My Love You Linc Fair" (Burns); "The Dream Garden" (Almeida Garrett); "Serenade" (Doveton). Mr. Gilbert's forthcoming tour as pianist and accompanist with Mr. Albany Riehl, the English violinist, will begin January 1, and engagements are booked to the first of June.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM HERE

Tells People How to Get Relief At Small Cost.

Thousands of men and women who have felt the sting and torture of this dread disease, which is no respecter of age, persons, sex, color or rank, will be interested to know that while for many years rheumatism was considered an incurable disease, now it is one of the easiest afflictions of the human body to conquer. Medical science has proven it not a distinct disease in itself, but a symptom caused by inactive kidneys. Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and other waste products of the system which should be filtered and strained out in the form of urine. The function of the kidneys is to sift these poisons and acids out and keep the blood clean and pure. The kidneys, however, are of sponge-like substance, the holes or pores of which will sometimes, either from overwork, cold or exposure become clogged and inactive, and failing in their function of eliminating these poisons from the blood, they remain in the veins, decompose and settling about the joints and muscles, cause the untold suffering and pain of rheumatism and backache, often producing complications of bladder and urinary disease, weakness, etc.

The following simple prescription is said to relieve the worst cases of rheumatism because of its direct action upon the blood and kidneys, relieving, too, the most severe forms of bladder and urinary troubles: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be had from any good prescription pharmacy, and are absolutely harmless and safe to use at any time.

RESTORATIVE TREATMENT FOR NERVOUS MEN.

Coming from a source of unquestioned authority on the ailments of men it is presumed to be infallible, while the profession generally endorse the ingredients and prescribe them in many different forms of various diseases. The following formula is highly efficient in quickly restoring in nervous exhaustion, melancholia, anxiety, timidity in venturing, dizziness, heart palpitation, trembling limbs, insomnia, thinness, cold extremities, tired-at-in feeling and general inability to do those natural and rational acts upon which depends a man's success and happiness in social and every-day life.

The instructions for mixing at home secretly so that no embarrassment may be felt, are as follows: First get three ounces of syrup sarsaparilla compound and one ounce compound fluid halmwort; mix and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce compound essence cardol and one ounce tincture cadomene (not cardamon) and mix all together. The directions are to take one teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring, until bounding health and full strength are restored. Even a few weeks will witness most wonderful results.

Astonishing nervous force and equilibrium follow the treatment, no matter how serious

INDIA UPRISING

FRANCE SAID TO BE AIDING THE REBELS.

Every Day Brings Additional Reports of Murders and Attempts From Bengal.

London, Dec. 15.—Lord Morley will make a most important statement for the government as to the situation in India, and what the government proposes to do to meet it in the house of lords tomorrow.

The situation in India is admitted by very critical, so critical in fact, that the viceroy, Lord Minto, has decided to cancel a number of appointments in other parts of the empire, and remain for the present, at least, in Calcutta. It is admitted by the government that sedition is steadily spreading and that assassinations of officials are becoming more frequent. It has been discovered that seditious literature has been introduced into India from France and it is understood the French government has been requested to take steps to stop it.

Lord Morley's statement is looked for with great interest. All that can be stated with any certainty as far as government action is concerned is that a comprehensive Indian reform bill is being prepared with great care, the Indian office here and the Indian government acting in close co-operation, but it will be several months before it is ready for presentation to parliament.

Outrages in India. In the meantime hardly a day passes but what brings from India a tale of murder, or attempted murder, with British officials as the victims. Among the most recent outrages of this character was the throwing of a bomb filled with dumbbells at a railway carriage on the Eastern Bengal railway near Agartala, in which Public Prosecutor Hume was traveling. The bomb fell short and exploded harmlessly. In the Lahore district, District Superintendent of Police Clough and two loyal sowars were murdered by a constable.

These are typical cases and others are constantly being reported.

BOYS MEET RIP'S DWARF.
Catskill, N. Y., Dec. 15.—Gus Overbaugh and Horace Cook, boys, went hunting for rabbits on East Jewett mountain. The lads came across a big brush heap in a clearing. Cook mounted the pile and began dancing on it, hoping to start a bunny.

Overbaugh, viewing the performance from a stump, suddenly saw the mass of brush arise in the air and amble toward him, with a badly rattled boy on top of the heap, taking the creepiest ride of his life.

As Overbaugh was about to throw a backward somersault from his perch on the stump in order to escape from what he firmly believed was a visitation from the crew that put Rip Van Winkle to sleep, he recognized the features of a big black bear under the brush.

While the boys were afraid of spoons, they were not to be scared by a bear, and their rifles soon laid the beast out dead.

They sold the bear for $32.

WILL LAND ON OIL OCTOPUS

New Tariff Bill Hard Blow to Standard.

General Cut All Along the Line, Especially on the Raw Materials.

GOSSIP ABOUT THE TARIFF.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 15.—The Standard Oil company will receive a hard jolt when the new tariff bill is framed. The ways and means committee already has decided informally that there shall be free trade in oil. There has been no official decision to this effect, but Chairman Sereno E. Payne has agreed to the proposition, and the other ardent standpatters of the committee are willing. Representative Crumpacker, a member of the committee, considers it a foregone conclusion that the Standard, the greatest of all trusts, will be deprived of its tariff prop.

There has been a good deal of misunderstanding as to the tariff benefit enjoyed by the Standard Oil company. In reply to the charge that "the tariff is the mother of trusts" political orators of the standard persuasion have been pointing to the oil trust. It has been a stock argument that the oil trust has grown up to be the biggest of all the trusts notwithstanding there is no tariff on oil.

It is true that the Dingley schedules impose no direct rate on oil, but in that act there is a provision that whenever a foreign country levies a tariff on any product imported from the United States there shall be levied automatically a tariff on the same product coming from that country into the United States equal in amount to the tariff imposed by the foreign country.

By virtue of this provision the Standard Oil company is given a high wall of protection as against Russia, which is its leading competitor in the oil business. Russia levied a tariff against American oil and immediately a tariff against Russia oil became effective, equal in amount to the Russian tariff.

Chairman Payne's Plan.
The plan of going after Standard Oil company proposed by Chairman Payne, Mr. Crumpacker and others is to add a phrase to the automatic provision of the Dingley bill, so changing it that it will not apply to oil. The effect of this would be to insure actual and not theoretical free trade in oil.

While the profits of Standard Oil will thus be cut down there is a likelihood that there will be a general overhauling of some of the existing schedules. The tariff on hides is likely to be abolished. There is a strong sentiment in favor of wiping out the tariff on lumber. The tariff on leather will be materially reduced and the woolen schedule will be pared.

There is no longer any doubt that the tariff on a steel and iron will undergo a severe surgical operation. Conservative members of the ways and means committee will not be surprised if the steel and iron schedules are reduced one-half. The evidence brought out at the ways and means hearings overwhelmingly indicates that the high prices charged the manufacturers of steel is one of their most serious drawbacks.

Free Raw Materials.

The outlook in general is for a reduction all along the line in the prices of raw materials that enter into manufactures. Leading manufacturers all over the country are complaining that while they have had more business during the last several years than they ever had before and have turned out more manufactured products, they have made less money because they have had to pay such high prices for raw materials that their margin or profit has gone glimmering.

The demand for free raw materials is finding champions among members of congress who are strongly wedded to protection as a general proposition. Senator Isaac Stephenson, of Wisconsin, is one of these. He is one of the wealthiest men of his state, and has a control of a large number of industries, including paper mills, etc.

"Free raw materials," said he, "will go a long way toward opening the doors for small manufacturers once more to enter the markets, which, of late years, have been closed to them by reason of trust control of American sources of raw material. By the removal of the tariff on raw material neither the investor nor the worker will be adversely affected and the trust will be deprived of their most powerful leverage—control of the market for raw materials."

Exceptional.

The June bride frowned. "These tomatoes," she said, "are just twice as dear as those across the street. Why is it?"

"Ah, madam, these"—and the grocer smiled—"these are hand-picked."

"Of course," she said, hastily; "I might have known. Give me a bushel, please."—Harper's Weekly.

PLANTS FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Many of the plants the florists offer for sale at this holiday season are very beautiful and almost irresistible, but where we can only buy a limited number it pays to select those that will last longer than a few days, or even weeks, as many of the Christmas plants are short lived.

Among these long-lived plants none is prettier or carries out the Christmas colorings better than the Solanum or Jerusalem cherry. It grows easily from seed and when fully grown attains a height of about eighteen to twenty inches. It is planted out in the garden in spring when quite small in full sunlight, and in the fall is carefully lifted and planted and potted in good rich garden soil and sand, shaded for a few days after potting. It will soon show a small insignificant blossom, which is followed by small fruit very much resembling cherries, without stems, of a bright red and yellow color.

The berries remain on the plant the greater part of the winter. When they begin to drop off save a few of the seeds for the following winter. They are plants of one season's growth and must be grown fresh every year as described above from seed. The seed should be sown in sandy soil, in pots as soon as ripe, so you will have plants well started by planting-out time in spring.

The arbutus crenulata rubra is a beautiful plant for decorations for winter. It is not at all common, as it takes several years to grow to a size suitable for use. In foliage it very much resembles the common laurel, only the form is much more handsome and the foliage quite firm and heavy. The plant resembles a beautiful shapely miniature tree. When three years old it has attained a height from one foot to eighteen inches and bears a number of clusters of rich scarlet berries, in shape and color and size, just like the holly which remain hanging on the tree until blossoming time next fall.

Another pretty idea for decoration that is cheerful the entire winter and has become very popular of late is to have pretty hardy evergreens in ornamental pots standing in the outside hallway. They being quite hardy will not suffer by exposure to cold, and if only pretty shapes are selected, are very effective and timely. They require to be kept damp, but never wet, for if they were to freeze too hard, it would break the pot. For this purpose only the best and choicest specimens of dwarf varieties are used. They are lifted and potted in common soil, and can with care be kept in the pots all the following summer by plunging them part way in the ground. They will require to be kept watered every day during dry weather. Of course, being confined in a pot, they will not grow much, but will keep fresh and pretty until fall.

The unanswered prayer finds its fruitage in the disciplined heart.

As proof of the lasting qualities wood was as sound as when new. of cypress, a coffin recently was excavated at New Orleans which had been buried since 1563, yet the never tries to take up all the road.

BULLS ARE ROUTED AT WINDY CITY

Bears Get the Upper Hand in Wheat Pit.

Government Report Differs From Speculators' Figures; Other Factors Drive Prices Down.

CORN IS LOWER, OATS STEADY.

Chicago, Dec. 15.—When the government report last Monday made the condition of winter wheat from four to six points higher than the trade generally in this market had anticipated it knocked the props from under the prices of that grain and there was a tumble early in the week from which no motive sufficiently strong for recovery could be found up to the closing of the market Saturday.

Conviction is strong in many quarters that the government report is too optimistic, but going behind the returns means simply the placing of one set of calculations against another and taking one's choice. Several state reports bear out the reasonableness of a difference of opinion as to the outlook of the crop of 1908-9. For instance, the Missouri state authorities report a condition of growing wheat considerably below that of the government and announce an acreage a half million acres short of that given out at Washington. On top of this pessimistic message is the complaint of damage by the Hessian fly. Kansas' state report also shows a smaller acreage and poorer condition—the figures being 88 against 92 fixed upon by the federal department.

These state messages are giving the bulls ground for hope that future reports may vindicate their judgment of conditions and of the outlook for the market next year, but the weight of opinion and argument has been on the nether side, hence the slump in values.

Europe Little Interested.
The European buyer has occasion now to be less interested in the American situation even than hitherto, so far as supplies are concerned. Expert opinion is that the surplus of this country will be 150,000,000, or equal to that of last year. Side by side with this estimate is the generally accepted view that the source of supply from other countries is as promising as it was a year ago. There may be a falling off of 20,000,000 bushels in the Argentine, as reported by the officials of the republic, but it is accepted that Australia's surplus will more than make up for this deficiency. Moreover, India may be counted on, apparently, for a larger share in furnishing the world's foodstuffs than a year ago.

Foreign markets during the week showed the general lack of anxiety in that quarter. There has been no difficulty in getting current supplies at prices that were satisfactory and there is more than ever a disposition to take things easy and wait future developments with hope that American values will get down to a more alluring basis.

With the present plane of prices in Chicago the situation has assumed more normal aspect, considered in view of the relationship between the western and the eastern markets. Ten days ago there was almost an anomalous situation of Philadelphia and Baltimore consuming wheat at the same or at a lower value than prevailed right here in the center of the wheat market and close to the producing territory. There has been an evening up process the last week, due to the big slump in prices here.

Drop in Prices Precipitated.
The tumble began immediately after the government report was published. There was nothing in the northwestern situation to combat the influence of the government figures. The flour grade was reported dull and difficulty was being encountered to get shipping directions for the product that had been sold some time ago at lower quotations. Weak foreign markets added to the weight on the market. Once values began to give way, there was nothing to sustain them. Those who had relied on the Patten judgment weakened under the avalanche of adverse influence and began to sell. As prices went down stop-loss orders were encountered and those still further helped along the tobogganing. Long wheat was dumped on the market in great quantities. This process continued day after day.

The one note of hope early in the week was the decreasing receipts in the northwest and these were offset by a dead cash demand. Minneapolis millers reported they were able to buy wheat from the southwest at attractive terms, but business was such with them that their transactions were cautiously carried on at the wheat-buying end. There was more or less fear that of the large quantities of May and July that were dumped on the market, much of it was from the strong Patten holdings. This fright was an expression of the panicky feeling that prevailed. The week closed with the bears in the ascendancy and nothing in sight to materially change the face of things in the immediate future.

Corn in Sympathy.
Corn prices were sloughed off with those of wheat and the loss for the week ranged from 2 to 4 cents for the distant options. Weather conditions generally were favorable in the first hand marketing territory for deliveries and offerings were freely made. To meet there there was a very dull eastern market and little inspiration anywhere along the line. Sentiment was bearish in sympathy with the wheat market. Missouri, Iowa and Illinois interior points were selling freely and the weather was favorable for the movement of grain. Liquidation on a generous scale ensued, and while this was going on private elevators here were turning out contract corn at a rapid rate, more than doubling the supply of that grade over the week before. Toward the close of the week there was a visible betterment of the shipping demand, but commission houses were exerting a pressure that could not be withstood.

Oats Held Their Own.
As is often the case oats played an independent role and did not suffer with wheat and corn in the price crashes, values remaining virtually as they were at the close of the week before. The more timid traders, fearing the uncertainties that invested the other pits, transferred their attention to oats with a resultant larger interest and greater activity in that commodity. Fluctuations were narrow and receipts continued on a small scale. Late in the week a wholesale shipping demand was developed and prices strengthened only to a shade off with the weakness of wheat and corn. The sample market showed more stability than the futures. Provisions like oats enlisted a widening speculative interest and prices were well maintained in spite of the unusually large run of hogs from the interior. The trade took little note of the fact that the total of packing for the week before was $15,000, compared with $50,000 the same week the year before. A strengthening factor was the expansion in the shipments over those of last year. Strength in the futures was traceable to the covering of shorts by local speculators and to additional investments by one of the leading grain dealers, who is interested in provisions as a side issue. The accepted estimates of stocks of provisions show a small increase in mess pork and prime steam lards and a 25 per cent. increase in dry salt ribs. Since November 1 the total slaughtering of hogs is 1,750,000 ahead of a year ago. The end of December is likely to show a still larger lead over the record of 1907, but January and February are likely to show a falling off comparatively, although not sufficient to overcome the present surplus.

River stage at 7 o'clock this morning 7.8, a fall of 0.1 since yesterday morning. The river will continue to fall for several days.
The steamers Clyde and Dick Fowler backed out in the river this morning at 8 o'clock lashed together. The Clyde was crippled on one side and the Fowler helped her to turn. The Dick had a large number of passengers and a big freight trip for Cairo and way landings. She will return this evening at 8 o'clock.

The Clyde arrived from Waterloo, Ala., and all way landings last night at 9 o'clock with an extra big cargo of freight and a number of passengers. She had three cars of packed freight for Paducah, Metropolis and Joppla, seven cars of lumber for Joppla and five cars of lumber for Metropolis. The Clyde met with a little more hard luck while on her way out of the Tennessee. She was 60 miles up the Tennessee yesterday when the follower head on the farboard side gave way. The Clyde will have the broken machinery mended and leave tomorrow evening at 6 o'clock, her regular time, for Waterloo and way landings.

The Chattanooga will be in port today from down the river and receive freight at the wharfbank until tomorrow noon, when she will leave for Chattanooga and all way landings.
The Bob Dudley will be due tonight from Clarksville and way landings and will unload and load freight. She will leave for Nashville tomorrow at noon.

The City of Saltville will be due in port tonight about 8 o'clock from St. Louis on her way up the Tennessee to Waterloo, Ala., and way landings. The Saltville will be due out of the Tennessee next Sunday.

The George Cowling was in port twice today with a large passenger and freight list from Metropolis.

The Royal came in port this morning on time from Bay City with a cabin full of passengers and a large freight business. She returned at 2 o'clock this afternoon with all the business she could handle.

The J. B. Williams, with a tow of 40 empty barges, arrived in port this morning from Mound City, where she has been tied up. The Williams with her big tow is tied up in the Tennessee to await a rise in the Ohio and in the meantime be out of the way of the ice that might come floating down the Ohio at any time.

The American arrived yesterday from the Tennessee with a tow of several barges of ties and went on to Joppla. The American returned from Joppla last night and will return to the Tennessee late this afternoon or tomorrow morning after another tow of ties.

The E. A. Voight arrived from Joppla yesterday after delivering a tow of Tennessee river ties. The Voight will leave in a few days for the Tennessee after another tow of ties.
The Harth is due from Caseyville with a tow of several flats of coal for the West Kentucky Coal company.

The Egan has her tow almost filled with coal and she will leave in a few days for the Mississippi with a tow of West Kentucky coal.

The Henrietta will be due in port tomorrow from the Tennessee with several barges of ties.

The Jim Duffy, Blue Spot and the I. N. Hook should all be in this week from the Tennessee with ties.

Official Forecasts.

The Ohio at Evansville, not much change for 12 hours, rise slowly at Mt. Vernon, not much change during the next 36 hours. At Paducah and Cairo, will become stationary tonight, then fall.

The Wabash, at Mt. Carmel, very little change during the next 26 hours.

The Tennessee, from Florence to the mouth, and the Mississippi, from below St. Louis to Cairo, will continue falling during the next two days.

Estimates Wanted.

The city has instructed the board of education to take bids on buildings and closets with sewer connections at the Lee and Lincoln school buildings. Plans and specifications can be seen at the office of the clerk, C. G. Kelly, 321 Kentucky Avenue. All bids must be in by noon Monday, December 21, 1908. Rights are reserved to reject any or all estimates.

LIVE STOCK AND TOBACCO.

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 15.—Cattle.—The receipts were 2,175 head, and with the cattle which arrived last week, too late for sale, the total offerings were close to 2,500 head. There was a very good attendance of local buyers and traders, and a fair number of outside buyers on the yards. The market opened up fully steady at last week's best prices on steady at last week's best prices on desirable butcher cattle; choice handy-weight steers, heifers and fat cows selling very readily; the medium and common kinds, however, were slow to a shade lower as the holiday season is near at hand, and on that account almost every butcher wanted just a shade better cattle than usual. There was an excellent demand for high-grade feeders and high-grade stock cattle at steady prices, slop steers were in very good demand, but hardly as active as a week ago, common plain, trashy stock cattle were dull and hard to find an outlet for. Bulls, steady, canners and cutters slow to a shade lower, Milch cows unchanged. Heavy cattle steady. The pens were fairly well cleared. We quote shipping steers $4.25@5.50; beef steers, $2.75@4.40; fat steers and cows, $2.75@4.00; cutters, $2.00@2.75; canners, $1.00@2.00; bulls, $2.00@3.40; feeders, $2.75@4.10; stockers, $2.00@3.75; choice milch cows, $35.00@45.00; common to fair, $10.00@30.00. Calves—Receipts, 164; market firm; good to choice veals, $6.50@7.00; choice calves, higher; medium calves, $4.00@5.50; common, $2.50@4.00. Hogs—Receipts, 7,511. The market opened early; top hogs and roughs were 5c lower; lights, 10c lower; pigs steady; 160 lbs. and up, selling at $5.65; 130 to 160 lbs., $5.30; pigs $4.75; roughs $5.00 down. The pens were fairly well cleared; market closed slow. Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 118. The market ruled quiet, about steady; best lambs, $4.00@5.00; culls, $2.50@4.00; fat sheep, $3.00 down.

St. Louis, Dec. 15.—Cattle—Receipts, 5,000, including 1,600 Texans, steady. Beef steers, $3.75@7.60; stockers and feeders, $3.75@4.50; cows and heifers, $3.00@6.50; cows and heifers, $1.75@4.50. Hogs—Receipts, 8,000; 5c lower. Pigs and lights, $4.25@5.40; packers, $5.00@5.65; butchers and best heavy, $5.40@5.80. Sheep—Receipts, 2,000; 5c to 10c lower. Natives, $3.00@4.50; lambs, $3.50@7.25. Kansas City, Dec. 15.—Cattle—Receipts, 13,000, including 400 south erns. Market steady to 10c lower. Native steers, $4.50@7.50; southern steers, $3.40@5.50; southern cows, $2.25@4.00; native cows and heifers, $2.00@5.75; stockers and feeders, $3.00@4.90; bulls, $2.40@4.00; calves, $3.50@7.00; western steers, $3.75@5.50; western cows, $2.50@4.50. Hogs—Receipts, 11,000; steady. Bulk of sales, $5.10@5.65. Sheep—Receipts, 10,000; 10c lower. Mutons, $4.00@4.90; lambs, $4.50@6.65; range weaners, $2.75@5.65; fed ewes, $2.75@4.40. Chicago, Dec. 15.—Cattle—Re-tobacco market last week, and while it was not up to the point hoped for, it was a welcome change from the distressing dullness of the preceding week. The demand was much more lively, and 65 hogheads were sold by the Planters' Protective association. No new tobacco has been placed on the market as yet. Receipts of the new crop at the stripping and pricing houses were heavier at the close of the week than they have been at any time this season. Steady sales were made by the Planters' Protective association all over the dark district, as is shown by the report of Auditor Seales. The report for the week ending December 9 is as follows:

Clarksville Tobacco. Clarksville, Tenn., Dec. 15.—There were no receipts in the local tobacco market last week, and the association reported only 34 hogheads sold. The local market is very quiet. The new crop is in the barns, and as soon as a favorable tobacco season is had will begin to move. The following prices are quoted: Low lugs, $6.00 to $6.50; medium lugs, $7.25 to $7.75; common lugs, $6.50 to $7.00; good lugs, $8.00 to $8.50; low leaf, $7.00 to $8.50; common leaf, $9.00 to $10.00; medium leaf, $10.50 to $11.50; good leaf, $12.00 to $12.50.

Greatly Underpriced Sale of Fine Lot of Suits

WE PLACED ON SALE MONDAY the greatest values in Suits ever offered in Paducah. The telegram below explains itself. These Suits will be placed on sale at same reduced prices as bought. They are mostly greens and grays, hard finished, worsteds and broadcloths; all sizes. Now added to this we place our entire remaining stock of suits on sale at advertised prices below. We have had a tremendous season in our suit department and now as the stock is broken in color and size, we inaugurate our General Clearance Sale, adding this large purchase of new Suits that have just arrived. You know without our saying the class of suits these are and that no fictitious prices were placed or added to them at the first of the season. They were then marked at legitimate prices. Now it is your time to buy at cost and less. Come down early, for we expect our entire suit stock to go in short order at these attractive prices. Don't put off; the very suit you want may be the first to go; then, too, remember, the sizes are broken, although you will find all sizes included in this sale, 16 to 42 sizes, yet we haven't all sizes in any one suit, one or two of a suit only.

CIGARETTE EVIL TELLS A SAD AND PATHETIC STORY

One of the greatest menaces to our moral and intellectual well-being today is the fact that cigarette-smoking is becoming a popular fad among boys and young men, while the use of a strong pipe is a close second in favor. Go where you will in this broad land of ours, and the pale faces, bleary eyes, trembling fingers, and the foul stench of cigarette fumes tell the same pathetic story. This most serious blight upon the bloom and beauty of our American boyhood is chargeable to parental ignorance and carelessness. For the past eight years I have been tracing out the cigarette boy's biography, and I have found that in practically all cases the lad began his smoking habit clandestinely, at an early age, and with little or no thought of its seriousness, while the fond parents perhaps believe that their boy was too good to engage in such a practice.

Many Good Men Smoke.

It is not the purpose of this paper to make an attack upon smoking in general. A majority of the best and ablest men of the country are smokers, and they unquestionably get a great deal of satisfaction out of their cigars and pipes. After a man has fully acquired the habit, smoking tends to drive away depression and to make him better satisfied with his lot and a more agreeable companion of men and women. By this I do not mean that the smoker has these advantages over the non-smoker, but rather that the former, through the indulgence of his habit, gets these results over and above what he has when he goes without his usual cigar. Out of one hundred such men whom I interviewed, ninety-nine frankly admitted that smoking tends to injure the health, and that they would not advise any young man to begin the habit. This practice is very offensive to many delicate natures, is somewhat filthy at its best, and disgustingly filthy at its worst, as the ordinary smoking-car will bear witness. Often, in public places, even refined women are forced to breathe the sickening fumes coming direct from the nostrils of some coarse, brutal cigarette smoker. Smoking is a practice entirely unnecessary to the development and refinement of the race, and it will in time doubtless go the way of the liquor-drinking habit.

Most Hurtful in Case of Boys.

But the serious nature, and even the cruelty, of this smoking habit among men is at once apparent when we consider its influence and effects upon boys. I have tabulated reports of the condition of nearly 2,500 cigarette-smoking school boys, and in describing them physically my informants have repeatedly resorted to the use of such epithets as "sallow," "sore-eyed," "puny," "squeaky-voiced," "sickly," "short-winded," and "extremely nervous." In my tabulated reports it is shown that, out of a group of 25 cases of young college students, smokers, whose average age of beginning was 13, according to their own admissions they had suffered as follows: Sore throat, four; weak eyes, ten; pain in chest, eight; "short-wind," twenty-one; stomach trouble, ten; pain in heart, nine. Ten of them appeared to be very sickly. The younger the boy the worse the smoking hurts him in every way, for these lads almost invariably inhale the fumes; and that is the most injurious part of the practice. According to Dr. Sims Woodhead, professor of pathology in Cambridge university, cigarette-smoking in the case of boys partly paralyzes the nerve cells at the base of the brain and thus interferes with the breathing and the heart action.

The injurious effects of smoking upon the boy's mental activities are very marked. Of the many hundreds of tabulated cases in my possession, several of the very youthful ones have been reduced almost to the condition of imbeciles. Out of 2,336 who were attending public school, only six were reported "bright students." A very few, perhaps ten, were "average," and all the remainder were "poor" or "worthless" as students. The average grades of fifty smokers and fifty non-smokers were computed from the records of one term's work done in the Kansas Agricultural college, and the results favored the latter group with a difference of 17.5 per cent. The two groups represented the same class rank; that is, the same number of seniors, juniors, sophomores and freshmen.

The ordinary cigarette-smoking student often has a very peculiar experience in his effort to prepare his daily lessons, about as follows: He goes to his room in the evening with the full intention of studying and opens his text-book, but a certain feeling of nervous uneasiness soon leads his hands automatically to roll and light a cigarette. He indulges the habit a few minutes when, presto, the lesson task which awhile ago looked serious and urgent now appears trivial and unnecessary, and he accordingly neglects it. He is now affable and companionable, but the higher moral judgments have lost their value to him and he is most ready to yield to the evil suggestions of others. The partial brain paralysis resulting from the smoking makes the victim regard with indifference the most sacred promise he has ever made to any one, and he is likely to violate it upon the slightest provocation.

Parents must learn more about the nature of this insidious habit and prevent its being taken up. The following methods of prevention have been reported effective: (1) Begin to talk to the boy as early as his sixth or seventh year about the matter and make a strong appeal to his sense of honor. Do not be too insistent and threaten to inflict punishments, but indicate rather that you think him too worthy to take up such a practice. (2) Offer to set aside some material or pecuniary reward to be paid when he becomes of age, provided he continues his total abstinence, and add to this the sentiment that he may then do as he pleases. Never ask a boy to pledge away in advance the years of his manhood. (3) Remind the boy in every possible way how much concern you have for him.—Prof. W. A. McKeever, professor of philosophy in the Kansas State Agricultural college, in Southern School Journal.

Coffee and Cigars.

Coffee, a liqueur and a cigar after dinner have been denounced as superfluous adjuncts to the meal, useless, even injurious objects of self-indulgence. But now comes the London Lancet, court of last resort in matters medical, physiological and hygienic, with kind and reassuring words for the bon vivants who love these postprandial accessories. They are superfluous, says the Lancet, from a physiological standpoint of view, but valuable from a psychological. They are the indispensable corollary to a good dinner, because the dishes that have formed the meal have set up a craving for just these things. The Lancet says the liqueur is a carminative composed of essential oils which soothe and at the same time increase the activity of the gastric circulation. Coffee, although sometimes acting unfavorably by delaying digestion, is an antidote to alcohol and serves to keep the mental faculties clear. Finally, tobacco is held by many authorities to increase the secretions of the alimentary canal and to favor the functions of the kidneys.—New York World.

C. B. Bronston, acting for the State Revenue Agent Arthur E. Hopkins, filed suit against the Lexington Interurban Railway company for $195,000 alleged to be due for franchise taxes upon $3,500,000 for the years 1906-7-8. The defendant is a New Jersey corporation, and has an issue of $2,000,000 in stocks and $1,053,000 in bonds.

A Very Wrong Idea A Young Man Had It.

A well known young man said the other day: "I would like to start a bank account if I could ever save up enough money to do so." That is the idea a great many people have, that they must have $40 to $80 to start. That is wrong, very wrong. The way to start a bank account is to bring a few dollars to us each salary day and place it in our Savings Department, where it draws 4 per cent interest and you will be surprised how fast it will grow.

WATER VAPOR FOUND ON MARS

Prof. Percival Lowell Has Photograph of Spectrum.

Atmosphere on This Planet Gives
Further Credence to Theory
That It is Inhabited.

PRESENT AND MEASURABLE.

Boston, Dec. 14.—Prof. Percival Lowell makes an exceedingly important and interesting statement with reference to the presence of water vapor on Mars. His assistants have been able to determine that it is there present and measurable. Precisely what the measure means has not been determined, but it is an amount that betrays itself in the lines of the spectrum, lines that show that the atmosphere of Mars affects the spectrum in the same way, though only one-fifth as much, as does the earth's envelope, therefore there is a strong possibility that Mars may be inhabited.

It will be remembered that there has been much controversy with reference to the atmosphere of Mars and its qualities. Those who disbelieve in any life in our neighbor in space have known that their point would be proved could the absence of an atmosphere be shown; while on the other hand, Prof. Lowell and his staff have been quietly at work seeking what evidence there might be in favor of an atmosphere. Of course, no one tries to establish for the Martians an ether nearly so dense as that which we now breathe. If the most sanguine of those who argue that Mars is inhabited realize it, the smaller body would be in the beginning provided with less atmosphere making elements and the smaller quantity of air would spread over a surface relative larger. So it is conceded at the outset that the atmosphere on Mars must be tenuous.

Spectrum Photographed.
At the last opposition, about a year ago, Dr. V. N. Sipher, an assistant at Lowell observatory at Flagstaff, set himself to taking photographs of the moon on the same plate. These comparison photographs showed the spectrum of Mars between two from the moon. Five such plates were secured. The telescope was the twenty-four-inch Clark refractor of the observatory, to which was fitted a spectroscopic peculiarity sensitive to the red end of the band. The plates were prepared according to a method developed by Dr. Sipher and were bathed in special solutions so that the red end of the spectrum, where the water vapor lines are, was particularly cared for.

The result of this careful work was a number of photographic plates on which to an unusual extent the red end of the spectrum was visible. So much extended was it that certain lines, notably A and C, not usually to be found in photographs, were in a place convenient for observations. It was evident at the time by a comparison of the moon and Mars on the plates the greater strength of the A line was shown in the Martian spectra. This meant water vapor, and an announcement was made at the time of the fact, but it has required much careful study to determine in any quantitative way what the lines mean. This has just been done for Prof. Lowell by Prof. Frank Avery.

A Little Mistake.
Lady (on the Metropolitan Railway, London): "Please, sir, will you help me to get out at the next station?"
Gentleman: "Why, certainly ma'am."
Lady: "You see, sir, it's this way. Being rather stout, I have to turn around and get out backward, and the porters always think I am getting in, so they push me back into the carriage and say, 'hurry up, ma'am.' I've passed four stations that way already."—Success.

An important transaction was made at Harrodsburg when John B. Thompson sold his entire holdings of whiskey stored in the warehouses of the Old Jordan Distillery, in Harrodsburg, to A. H. Blake, of Cincinnati. The consideration was not made public, but it is known to pass the half million mark.

SCIENCE SETTLES IT.

Dandruff Is Caused by a Germ That Saps the Hair's Vitality.

It is now a settled fact that dandruff is caused by a germ. Falling hair and baldness are the result of dandruff. Dr. E. J. Beardsley, of Champaign, Ill., got hold of the new hair preparation, Newbro's Herpicide—the only one that kills the dandruff germ. He says: "I used Herpicide for my dandruff and falling hair, and I am well satisfied with the result." Dr. J. T. Fugate, of Urbana, Ill., says: "I have used Herpicide for dandruff with excellent results. I shall prescribe it in my practice." Herpicide kills the dandruff germ. Physicians as well as the general public say so. Sold by leading druggists. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. R. W. ### WHERE RICH MEN ARE FEW.

They Are as Scarce in Bulgaria as Black Swans.

Bulgaria is the nearest approach to a peasant commonwealth which the world has known in modern times. There is not a Bulgarian Slav who is not the owner of a plot of land, upon which he lives and out of which he gets his own livelihood by his own labor.

Large land owners are almost unknown, says the London Illustrated News. The few men of wealth in the country are mostly of foreign birth or descent; and even they would not be counted as wealthy according to the standard of other European countries.

The small land owners, who form the vast majority of the population, are peasant born and peasant bred. They live under conditions of dirt and discomfort which no British or German or French laborer would tolerate for a week. Yet notwithstanding their disregard for the simplest sanitary arrangements they grow up singularly strong and healthy.

Moreover, they are free from the irritation caused among other laborers, overworked if not underpaid, by the spectacle of neighbors living in affluence and ease without any necessity to curtail their expenditure. Rich men are black swans in Bulgaria. It was told by a foreign banker in Sofia who had traded for many years in the country that he doubted greatly whether there were fifty men in all the rural districts who had net incomes of 1,000 pounds sterling a year.

Eagle's Enormous Strength.
Once when an eagle, shot through the body with a rifle ball, lay on his back I up-ended a long road skid and dropped it on him. Before it reached him he stretched up and caught it on his claws and held it up the length of his legs above him. I walked up on the skid and stood above him, and he easily held me and the skid, which I should judge would weigh more than 20 pounds. I look pains to be weighed the same day and weighed 119 pounds. Put a stick in one claw of a wounded eagle and let him grasp a small tree with the other, and a man must be stronger than I ever was to take the stick from him.—Forest and Stream.

BEARDED LADIES ARE COMMON

At Least a French Showman Offers to Supply Any Number.

An Englishwoman who confesses to a mild mania for attending the street fairs common in and around Paris says that she is always impressed by the extraordinary number of bearded ladies among the attractions.

"I was inclined to think that they were fakes," she says in the Gentlewoman, "but when I discovered that they were quite genuine my surprise at this wonderful supply of phenomena grew stronger. And when a few days ago I saw at the fair in the Avenue d'Orleans a lady exhibited with a flowing beard I could no longer withhold my curiosity."

"I applied for information to a gentleman well known in the showman world and who acts as a kind of agent to the people owning shows, supplying them with the necessary goods, human and otherwise. This gentleman appeared surprised at my question."

"Bearded ladies!" he exclaimed. "I can find as many as I like. You have no idea how many women, if they liked, could rival men as regards whiskers and mustaches. But they are not anxious to enter into that kind of competition."

In accord with the eternal fitness of things, people who keep harping on disagreeable things should be strung up.—Chicago News.

BREEDER GETS $144 PER DOZEN FOR FINE EGGS

When W. Theodore Wittman was a mere boy he had a fad—chickens. Today he is one of the five greatest living experts on fowls in the United States, and his sole occupation is to travel from place to place acting as judge at poultry exhibitions.

He has demonstrated what patience, study and scientific methods can accomplish. For instance, quite a number of years ago he purchased from Dr. Crocker, of Massachusetts, who had originated the breed, all of his silver-pencilled Plymouth Rock chickens. The latter, while of a very handsome type, were nothing extraordinary in that particular line of type. When Mr. Wittman secured the flock, however, he immediately began to study and experiment how to improve the breed. Gradually, by careful breeding and crossing, proper mating to eliminate all that was poor and detrimental, and to improve and develop their strong points, he succeeded so well that the greater part of his flock became prize winners in all of the leading poultry exhibits in the country, and one of his pullets drew first prize at the World's Fair in Chicago. This pullet is still living, and is now the property of L. A. McAlpin, the tobaccoist, to whom Mr. Wittman later sold his entire pen. If half the attention were paid to the proper development of the human race that is paid to that of poultry, the term "mollycoddle" would never have been coined.

Mr. Wittman's favorite fowl is the brown Leghorn, and it is with this particular breed that he has had his greatest success, and which made him famous all over the United States among lovers of fine poultry. As in the case with the silver-pencilled Plymouth Rock, this expert got together a pen of brown Leghorns of a good breed and then, by scientific breeding, careful sorting of eggs, and a constant elimination of poor specimens, he produced a breed and strain of Leghorns the wonder and admiration of all beholders and first-prize winners wherever exhibited. One day, in examining a brood of newly-hatched chickens, he found among them a lusus nature, a freak, an absolutely perfect pullet. The most minute examination failed to reveal a single flaw or speck. As Mr. Wittman says: "She was an accidental perfection."

This hen afterward became the famous "Crispinella," named after one of Nero's numerous wives. To this day her descendants to the fifth and sixth generation are always to be found among the prize winners in the fairs and poultry exhibitions throughout the country. When seven years of age she and a pen of other highly bred brown Leghorns were poisoned by some black-headed scoundrel. Although Mr. Wittman had some of the ablest Pinkerton detectives on the job, he never was able to uncover the slightest clue to the perpetrators of so foul a deed.—(Allentown (Pa.) Cor. ### THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

A Century Ago It Was Taken to Europe From Japan.

It is just 100 years ago that a French sailor living near Marseilles went up to Paris by diligence, guarding with the utmost care two precious little flower pots in which he had specimens of a strange plant. His name was Pierre Blancard, and on his arrival in Paris, in November, 1808, he obtained an interview with the Empress Josephine, who was devoted to flowers, among other things. Blancard had frequently sailed to China and Japan, and there had been struck by the beauty of the flower which was held in such high esteem in the far east. He had the greatest difficulty in getting his specimens out of Japan and in bringing them home safely in the slow sailing vessels of those days; but he succeeded, and managed to grow the plant in his garden at Aubagne, a suburb of Marseilles. The chrysanthemum has now spread over most of Europe, and is held in almost as great esteem as it is in the far east, where it was known certainly as long ago as the ninth century before the Christian era. In Europe there are many societies which are devoted to the culture of the chrysanthemum, but probably the growers will never attain the splendid colors which distinguish the flower in China and Japan, and here in England the gardeners would hardly know what to do without it nowadays.—London Globe.

WHO HE WAS

One Saturday, shortly before the close of business, Kuhn, Loeb and Company had occasion to send some bonds to J. Pierpont Morgan. As all the other employees had left, it was necessary to entrust the negro porter with the errand. He received careful instructions to take the valuable package to Mr. Morgan's office, and to insist upon giving it to "Mr. Morgan of J. P. Morgan and Company and to no one else."

By commendable persistence and many repetitions of his instructions he finally succeeded in reaching Mr. Morgan, who was in session with several other gentlemen in his private office.

"Ah wants to see Mr. Mawgan oh J. Piephon Mawgan an' Comp'ny," he doggedly insisted.

Mr. Morgan arose. "Well, I'm Mr. Morgan," he said. "Who are you?"

"Who—er—me?" stammered the porter. "Why, I'se de coon oh Kuhn, Loeb an' Comp'ny, an' heah's de papers Ah done brung yo'."—Everybody's Magazine.

He is a foe to truth who would try to defend it with error.

Another Wreck.

A Chicago man who once permitted himself to be persuaded to back a theatrical company was seated in his office one day when he received a telegram from the manager of the show. The troupe was somewhere in Missouri, and the telegram read thus: "Train wrecked this morning and all scenery and baggage destroyed. No member of company injured. What shall I do?"

The answer sent back by the Chicago man was as follows: "Try another wreck and have the company ride in the baggage car."—Chicago Record-Herald.

MORE GOING OUT THAN COMING IN

Disbursement Exceed Receipts by $58,000,000.

Over $272,000,000 From Which to Make Up Deficiency, Says Comptroller.

AN INCREASE IN CIRCULATION

Washington, Dec. 15.—The annual report of Mr. Cortelyou, the secretary of the treasury, shows a reversal of conditions for the fiscal year 1908, as compared with the fiscal year for 1907. For the latter year the receipts were $84,236,586 in excess of the disbursements. For the fiscal year of 1908 the disbursements were $58,070,201 in excess of the receipts, due to business depression and increased appropriations. Fortunately the report says the available cash balance at the beginning of the fiscal year was $272,000,000.

The treasury was called upon in the latter part of October, 1907, to render assistance in a financial panic which started in New York city and which gradually extended over the entire country. Through treasury operations during this financial disturbance the amount of public deposits with the banks reached $235,548,321 on November 30, 1907, and on December 27, 1907, the maximum of $259,994,271 was attained, after which it was decreased to $256,923,154 by the close of the month.

Further Withdrawals.

Further withdrawals decreased this amount to $118,379,526, on November 16, 1908. At the beginning of the present fiscal year there was a free circulation of money and large amounts were returned to the financial centers, and some of the depositaries voluntarily returned to the treasury a part of their holdings of public deposits, amounting in all to approximately $4,000,000. A further withdrawal of public money from depositary banks in New York city, made in January, amounted to $8,000,000, making the balance in the banks to the credit of the general fund at the end of January, $226,241,418.

Further voluntary surrender of deposits were made during February, and on June 30 the general fund had been reduced to $149,000,000.

The aggregate of trust funds, consisting of gold coin and standard silver dollars held for the redemption of certificates and notes for which they were respectively pledged, increased $139,000,000 during the year.

The monetary stock for the year increased $263,293,000. At the close of the fiscal year 1908 the money in circulation amounted to $1,928,015,488, or a per capita of $64.72. The percentage of gold to circulation was $45.95. There was an increase of $94,545,227 in the volume of national bank notes during the fiscal year closed July 1, last.

New National Banks. The report shows that from the date of the passage of the national bank act, in 1863, to July 1, 1908, charters were granted to 9,174 national banking associations, and at the close of the last fiscal year there were in operation 6,827 associations, with an authorized capital of $930,542,774. Banks to the number of 1,878 have been closed by the voluntary action of their stockholders, and 469 insolvent associations have been placed in charge of receivers.

The receipts from internal revenue taxes for the fiscal year 1908 were $251,711,126, a net decrease from 1907 of $17,955,646. The customs receipts for the same period amounting to $286,113,130, a decrease for the year of about $46,000,000.

Basing his figures on the estimate of appropriations already submitted by the several executive departments, the secretary is of the opinion that the excess of expenditures over receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909, may reach $143,046,796.

Of recent currency legislation, the secretary says that the act passed at the last session of congress has served a useful purpose, and will be available until the recommendations of the monetary commission created by that congress can be considered and acted upon.

The Austrian Cabinet.

The expected has happened in the organization of a new Austrian cabinet, with the former Home Minister, Baron von Bluenherth, at the head. The crisis came about in the usual way, through dissensions between Germans and Czechs, with boycottings, riotings and manslaughter at Prague, Reichenberg and elsewhere, throwing of inkpots in the Prague diet, resignation of the Czech ministers and threats to carry the gentle art of obstruction and inkpot throwing into the Reichsrath. There is little confidence that the new ministry will be able to preserve inter-racial peace, or that the distractions of the polyglot empire will be lessened by the forcible annexation of two more alien provinces.—New York Tribune.

The Minister—Then you don't think I practice what I preach, eh? The Deacon—No, sir, I don't. You've been preachin' on the subject o' resignation fur two years, an' yo' hlyva resigned yit.—Exchange.

The Spoils System.

The name is derived from a remark made in a speech in the United States senate in January, 1832, by Mr. Marcy of New York; speaking of and for the New York politicians, he said: "They see nothing wrong in the rule that to the victor belong the spoils of the enemy." This system had previously attained great power in the state of New York. Under Jackson's administration it prevailed in national politics and was soon adopted by nearly all parties, and applied to local as well as state and national offices.—Boston Globe.

HAS FOUGHT UNDER 4 DIFFERENT FLAGS

Major P. H. J. Farrell's Most Unique Record.

Has Been in Eight Wars and Has Served With Distinction.

WAS IN COMMAND OF MEN.

Maj. P. H. J. Farrell, the new president of the army of the Philippines, has one of the most unique records that any soldier in the world can show. He has been in "only eight" wars, in command of men. He has served with distinction under four flags and is yet only 40 years old. Wherever there has been wild work in the past score years could be found this dauntless challenger of fate. Since peace has befallen the world in the last few years he has withdrawn from his martial profession and become a surgeon. He is now recognized as an authority in his new field and is professor of military medicine and surgery at the Chicago college of Medicine and surgery.

Although an Englishman by birth, he has twice served under the Stars and Stripes, once in the China expedition for the relief of Peking, and again throughout the Philippine campaign. It was in the latter that he rendered his most distinguished service.

When Uncle Sam was making hurried preparations to rush 120,000 men into the Orient, Maj. Farrell was one of the first to volunteer his services to Gen. Anderson. Maj. Farrell was in the first detachment to leave and in a position of command. He was perhaps the most prominent figure in the capture of the island of Guam, was the first of the troops to set foot in the Philippines and was the only American soldier to cross the island of Luzon, although the hostile Filipino lines at the outbreak of hostilities.

The whole Filipino insurrection holds no more daring episode than that journey of 130 miles through a wild country infested with savage enemies, and no mission that was fraught with more important results. It was on Maj. Farrell's report after his Luzon trip that the plan of the successful campaign was based. But "fighting savages," he says, "is an everyday sort of business."

Maj. Farrell is the son of Gen. Farrell, a hotel Irish officer in the British Indian service, and was born in Calcutta 44 years ago. Owing to his remarkable physical development, he was admitted to Woolwich at an earlier age than most boys and before he was 20, was commissioned a subaltern and saw his first service in India during the Afridi war. He returned to England a veteran when most lads of his age were still at school, and at the outbreak of the Zulu war he was again at the front. In this campaign he was seriously wounded. Near him the French prince imperial was killed. At the close of the Zulu war he was sent to the Sudan and served in the Gordon relief expedition.

Back on horseback, in one of the skirmishes with the dervishes of the madhi, he received another almost fatal wound. He and his command charged three times into the thickest of the madhi's men. He was 18 months in the hospital after that. After that he visited South Africa and India again, and also went to Manila. At the outbreak of the Tonquin war between China and Japan he offered his services to the Chinese government. He was given command of a regiment and fought Tonquin war between China and Japan with the language of his men, he was forced to invent a system of whistle signals in order to give commands when his men went into action.

At the close of the war he drifted to Australia and became a member of the governor's staff in Queensland as inspector of mounted police. Hearing of a possible mixup between the republics of Guatemala and San Salvador, he came to America, but remained in San Francisco until the Cuban revolution. He joined the army of Gen. Balmaceda in the conflict of 1891 and after his commander's defeat, found himself a prisoner for two months. Only the fact that he was a British subject prevented his being executed.

There are two episodes of his life of which little is known. One is that of his supposed connection with the expedition to carry arms to Chili, which was nipped by the capture of the schooners Robert and Minnie by the United States government. The second was a mysterious mission from which he returned with a serious wound, which confined him to the hospital for several months.

Maj. Farrell is an ideal soldier in appearance. He stands over six feet tall, without an ounce of overweight, and is erect and lithe in carriage. Ten years ago he married an American girl after a steamer courtship, voyaging from Honolulu, and is the father of five children. His boys are all trained athletes, horsemen and marksmen. His two youngest astonished the keeper of a shooting gallery recently by making five bullseyes each in rapid succession.

Not a Safe Place.

Old Aunt Hepsy Garside never had seen a moving picture show before. She gazed in speechless wonder at the magic contrivance by which messenger boys were made to move with break-neck speed, barbers to shave their customers in less than a minute and heavy policemen to dash along the street at a rate never attained by a living specimen, either on or off duty.

It was all real to her. She could not doubt the evidence of her senses. All those things were taking place exactly as depicted.

Presently an automobile came in sight in the far background, moving directly toward the audience at the rate of at least a mile a minute. Just as a catastrophe seemed inevitable it swerved aside, passed on and disappeared.

Aunt Hepsy could stand it no longer. Hastily grasping the hand of her little niece she rose and started swiftly for the door.

"Come along, Minervy!" she said. "It ain't safe to stay here any longer. That thing didn't miss me more than two feet!"—Youth's Companion.

BATTLE SHIPS

VOYAGE OF THE PAST YEAR
 PROVEN "AN EPOCH MAKER"

Wants Coast Defense and More Big Battleships—Improvement in Marksmanship Shown.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Secretary Metcalf, of the navy department, in his annual report, discusses, as the most notable event of the past year the voyage of the battleship fleet which "has proven an epoch-making cruise."

Late in the spring of 1907 it was decided to send the Atlantic fleet on a practice cruise to the Pacific. When the purpose of giving this assemblage of 16 battleships such a practice cruise, under severe conditions, was announced, he states, criticism from high technical quarters was heard. The undertaking, it was said, was too monumental; dangers more than multiplied with numbers in such a case; battleships should not be sent around the globe on any ordinary occasion; the skeletons of some of them would doubtless be left in the Straits of Magellan; and if the ships should round South America, they would, one by one, arrive with machineries loose and un-serviceable, and with crews reflecting the condition of the material.

The facts are, Secretary Metcalf says, that the ships maintained schedule time, and have practically taken care of their own repairs on this cruise. The repairs list sent in at the naval station, Cavite P. I., have just been received, and are significant. They show that after the voyage to the distant borders of the Pacific, the needed repairs are negligible. The performance of the Oregon in 1898 has, it seems, been substantially repeated.

This cruise, as yet hardly half over, he declares has given us an opportunity to get better acquainted with the Republic of the south of us, with our own island possession, with the new and vigorous branch of the British Empire in Australia, and particularly with Japan; and has given to those countries a better opportunity to get acquainted with us. It has been everywhere understood and accepted, as it was intended, as the reaching out of a strong hand in friendly greeting on the part of America, and the cordial hospitalities extended to our fleet will be long remembered, and have powerfully influenced feeling in this country. Between the United States and every country visited there is a feeling of deeper interest and friendship than existed before the fleet sailed.

ing of deeper interest and friendship than existed before the fleet sailed.

Passing to certain recent criticisms of the new and larger battleships now building, the secretary says that at the conference, convened and opened by the president at Newport, the general matter of design of these ships was approved, after 43 days' consideration, by this assemblage of the best authorities available in the navy, consisting of about sixty officers all but seven of whom were line officers of the seagoing branch of the service.

Marksmanship he says has improved on the practice cruise. With respect to the assertion that our 12-inch guns are inferior to those of other powers, the facts are found to be that the actual muzzle energy of these 12-inch guns, which form the main armament of our eight latest battleships in commission, is somewhat greater than that of any gun afloat in any other navy.

A Greater Navy. Secretary Metcalf recommends that the navy yards at New York, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Puget Sound, and Mare Island be developed to their full capacity for the repair and maintenance of ships, but says it is not further desirable to develop other navy yards, at least until that at Guantanamo shall have been equipped, the last named station being regarded as of the first military importance and as a natural strategic base.

It is deemed highly desirable to acquire by purchase or to construct a dock in San Francisco harbor. With the acquisition of such a dock, and the bringing up to high efficiency of the yards at Bremerton and Mare Island, another navy yard on the Pacific coast will not be necessary for some time to come.

The secretary recommends that congress authorize at its approaching session the construction of four battleships, four scout cruisers, 10 destroyers, four submarines, three colliers, one repair ship, one ammunition ship, two mine-laying ships—these two ships to be converted from cruisers now in the navy list.

No Great Rush.

A number of weeks after an old man was appointed postmaster of a small village the villagers and their friends began to complain about the matter. An inspector investigating the matter found out that the postmaster had sent out no mail since his entrance into office, and pointing to the hundred or more dusty letters that the postmaster had kept by him, said, sternly:

"Why on earth didn't you let these go?"

"I was waiting till I got the bag full," said the old man with a little smile.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The steps downward are so many and so small that men seldom recognize the grade.

HE WON

The officers' mess was discussing rifle shooting.

"I'll bet anyone here," said one young lieutenant, "that I can fire twenty shots at two hundred yards and call each shot correctly without waiting for the marker. I'll stake a box of cigars that I can."

"Done!" cried a major. The whole mess was on hand early next morning to see the experiment tried.

The lieutenant fired.

"Miss," he calmly announced.

A second shot.

"Miss," he repeated.

A third shot.

"Miss."

"Here, there! Hold on!" protested the major. "What are you trying to do? You're not shooting for the target at all."

"Of course not," admitted the lieutenant. "I'm firing for those cigars." And he got them.—Everybody's Magazine.

Early Lotteries.

Constantly we are reminded of the prominent part the lottery had in the affairs of the community in the early part of the last century. Harvard college has dormitories built from the proceeds of the sale of chance. Many Connecticut bridges were built in the same way and the Hotel Tontine at New Haven was started thus. The death of Lucius Fitch, Saturday night, brought an end to the peculiar condition of the charter of the hostelry, which was built about 1825. Shares of stock numbering 200 were sold and by the terms each stockholder was to name some nominee whose death would mark the termination of the existence of the shares. When all but seven of the nominees had died the property was to be divided equally among the remaining shareholders. This will now be done, as only seven nominees are still alive. All of them are over 83 years old.—Springfield Republican.

No day is long enough to waste any of it in nursing enmity.

GROWTH OF TREES.
An Inch in Four Years Is the Fastest Known.
An inch in four years is the swiftest growth known in the race of trees. Farmers and fruit growers are told to have no reliable unit rule to govern them in knowing how long it takes for a tree to grow an inch, but some carriage makers have found out. They ask about forty of the country's prominent vehicle and wheel manufacturers drawing their stock from territory where hickory, white oak, ash and tulip trees grow to select and express to them short cross sections of these woods from the odds and ends about their shops. These were to be selected for the average width of growth, and the size of each block was to be about one inch lengthwise, one inch across and a fourth of an inch thick. They examined these blocks carefully and marked on each block a one-inch space across the average size of growths of the annual rings. They then counted the number of rings within the inch space on each block and registered the total in ink thereon. Then they counted these totals on all the samples of each of the several kinds of timber submitted and in the usual way thus ascertained the average number of years required for each kind of tree to grow one inch.

The Emancipation Of the Chaperons.
By ALICE LOUISE LEE.
Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee.

"HUH!" Merriwether stretched his legs out luxuriously in front of the grate and puffed at his pipe. "A Christmas house party at the Pines." Then after a pause, "Who are invited?" His nephew leaned against the mantelpiece and stuffed his hands into his pockets as he enumerated the guests, the uncle keeping up a running and caustic comment:

"Engaged—going to be introduced for matrimonial purposes—engaged—the same." The enumeration ceased. "Yes, I see myself helping to chaperon your house party. I stroll into the reception room and stumble over an engaged couple. I sneak into the library and am frowned out again by a newly introduced couple. I bang into the music room and overhear a proposal. No, thank you, Roy; I shall spend Christmas in peace and my own room."

Roy picked up his hat and moved toward the door. "Modern house parties are not conducted along the lines you've laid down, uncle. Change your mind and judge for yourself." He turned the knob. "By the way, I didn't mention the other chaperon, did I? It's Mrs. Angell, Bertha's widowed aunt, you know." With this parting shot, which he knew was effective, Roy discreetly retreated.

After he had gone Merriwether sat an hour staring at the fire and pulling away at a smokeless pipe. Then he arose and looked earnestly at himself in the mantel mirror. "We're apt to run down," he apostrophized his reflection; "apt to run to seed, we bachelors. Now, this tie—let's see, it's six months out of style, and Gertrude used to be—hum." He stepped to the phone and called up his tailor, realizing that his mind had already undergone the change Roy hoped for.

Ten days later he arrived at The Pines just in time to dress for dinner. He was accompanied by a man and a smart lot of luggage, accessories which made so marked a change in his appearance that when at 6 o'clock he descended to the lower hall Bertha Monroe, awaiting her aunt at the foot of the stairs, surveyed him in delighted amazement.

"Why, Uncle Bruce," she exclaimed, "you look so fine I scarcely knew you!" Bertha was his nephew's fiancée and already claimed relationship in private to the uncle. "I'd make Roy wear evening clothes in the morning if he had such a splendid figure—so filled out, you know."

Merriwether, following her into the living room, laughed grimly at the doubtful compliment. "Oh, he'll tip the scales at 220 soon enough, don't worry!"

"You surely don't look that stout," began Bertha and, turning abruptly toward the entrance, finished with, "Does he, auntie?"

Gertrude Angell swept past her niece and met Merriwether's outstretched hand cordially. "Look? Why, he looks surprisingly like the Bruce Merriwether I used to know so well."

"Fifteen years ago," was on the end of Merriwether's tongue, but he checked himself just in time. Gertrude probably ignored lapses in time as women have a habit of doing, he thought. But surely hers was a face, a form, a bearing, which had so successfully withstood time as to entitle her to the appellation of youth. Her brown hair had not lost its luster, nor had her blue eyes lost aught of their sparkling interest in life, while she carried herself with her old time spring and vivacity.

Merriwether noted all these things as he sat opposite her at dinner. His memory flashed picture after picture before him—the primary days in their old home school, their grammar room betrothal, the warm friendship of later years, which had meant something more to him; then her marriage and life abroad. As he looked at her he had the uncomfortable feeling that, although her birth had antedated his by one year, she was many years his junior.

He was just characterizing himself as "old" when his nephew's voice aroused him and added point to his reflection. "Tomorrow morning we skate," announced Roy joyfully. "I've had the pond back here cleared for action, and the ice is O. K." Then he added carelessly, "By the way, Uncle Bruce, I forgot to tell you to bring skates along, but I can easily provide you with a pair."

Merriwether quaked inwardly, but made no reply until after dinner, when he backed his nephew into a corner and addressed him privately and forcefully. "I've not been on skates for ten years, and I don't intend to make a spectacle of myself now by any means."

"Why, uncle—er—you know, that makes things rather awkward, for Mrs. Angell does all those things so well, and—er—we don't want her to feel bored here."

"Oh!" groaned Merriwether. "In that case I'll try, but watch out for a repetition of a chapter in the 'Pickwick Papers!' and he turned abruptly into the ballroom.

"Are you looking over the scene of former triumphs?" asked a gay voice beside him. And Mrs. Angell moved across the room to straighten a candle in one of the candelabra.

Merriwether noted with admiration her free, light step. She was a superb specimen of womanhood, but he fervently wished she had appeared older. "Why is it," he asked impulsively, ignoring her question, "that women retain their youth so much longer than men?"

She paused with her hand on the candle and looked back. "I think," she replied thoughtfully, "it's because they insist on doing youthful things."

"There it is again!" he thought, with an internal groan. He would be obliged to skate and dance and do all the other uncomfortable things which forty years and 220 pounds shrink from. Still as he watched her move about the room the burden of it did not seem so onerous after all.

Therefore he danced not badly, but laboriously, all the while admiring the graceful ease of Gertrude Angell's motions.

"At least," he determined resolutely, "I'll not be caught skating, as I was dancing, without a bit of practice." It was 1 a. m. when he made this resolution and issued the command to his man, "Peter, get me up at 7—unless, in sudden inspiration, 'it should be storming.'"

Promptly at 7 he was awakened in a rebellious frame of mind. "Stiff as a cart horse," he grumbled. "I hope it's snowing like blazes."

The man raised the shade and looked out. "Sky clear as a whistle, sir."

So, with his sleep cut short two hours at both ends of the night, Merriwether dragged himself and the pair of skates, produced by his thoughtful nephew, out to the pond behind the hill. For an hour he skinned his knees, bumped his head and disturbed the equanimity of his temper before he was able to move alone with moderate speed and keep his feet under him.

When he went in to breakfast he was thankful for a few moments alone in front of a glowing grate fire. He stretched his aching legs toward the heat and rubbed the back of his head where a bump was appearing on the forehead. He listened idly to every direction in the hall until his attention was chained by two comments made just outside the door.

"Isn't she a perfect delight of a chaperon? And so young too! She can't be thirty."

The reply was given in a doubtful tone. "Why—e-e, yes, she must be all of thirty."

"Forty-one," muttered the listener doggedly, the light of his new resolve shining again in his eyes.

At 10 o'clock the entire party went out to the pond, and Merriwether skated and skated and skated until his teeth were clenched in desperation and his forehead knitted in his efforts to hold out as long as Mrs. Angell did.

That he was becoming a man of one idea he acknowledged to himself that afternoon on the sleigh ride. "What Gertrude dares, I dare," he told himself in feeble jest. That sleighing party was a nightmare to him for days afterward. The drifts were deep, and the sleigh was overturned again and again, generally with Merriwether at the bottom of the heap, owing to the fact that sleighs incline readily in the direction of 220 pounds. There, to vary the monotony of the tip-overs, there were miles of hillslides with a southerly exposure where the sun had melted the snow and obliged the party to walk.

Merriwether toiled up the slopes, husbanding his wind by maintaining silence, watching Gertrude's elastic steps gracefully and feeling his resolutions in respect to youthfulness ooze from his chilled finger tips.

"All out for our last climb!" cried Roy as the horses stopped at the foot of a steep rise. "This is our last hill."

"Thank the Lord!" said Merriwether devoutly behind his mustache. He that evening in the charm of Mrs. Angell's presence, and he noticed, too, with a pang of something very like jealousy, that Briggs, the youngest man in the party, occupied his spare moments looking in her direction.

"I'll see what the weather promises for tomorrow," was his irresolute comment as he reached his room at midnight and noted that Peter had obediently packed his things ready for the 9:10 train. "If it should storm, maybe"—was his last conscious thought, and then he drifted off into a land where Gertrude spent her Christmases with him beside a quiet hearstone and chaperoned house parties no more.

Next morning, when he awoke, the snow was driving against the window, while the wind whistled savagely through the trees. Merriwether turned over with a deep groan of satisfaction. There could be no sleighing, no skating, no tobogganing, such a day as this, and that night was Christmas eve and the Christmas tree. He had purchased an exquisite copy of "Maud" for Mrs. Angell. It was a poem they had once read together, and he wondered if his memory of the fact would touch her. With these thoughts he drifted back into sleep, and the morning train went thundering cityward without him.

But his triumph over the state of the weather was short lived. At the breakfast table his nephew curdled his blood by the announcement of the plans for the Christmas trees, which yet stood in the forest a mile across lots. "Two of the men are sick this morning, fellows, so we'll have to fall into line and fetch the trees," Roy proclaimed, with a relish born of twenty-three years and warm blood.

The "fellows," including Merriwether, worked in the storm until noon before the trees were properly cut, trimmed, cleaned and set up in the ballroom ready for the decorations and gifts. The ladies had the decorations in charge, but Merriwether found there was no rest for the weary. He balanced himself perilously by the hour on the top of stepladders, which swayed and creaked ominously under his weight; he climbed stairs to fetch packages from the billiard room; he searched for lost hammers and knelt on matted lads until he relegated Christmas and house parties to the lower regions.

At last the trees were decorated, and Roy called the party into the music room to practice Christmas anthems. Merriwether saw his fellow workers safely into the music room; then he dragged himself upstairs for a sojourn in the library, where he found a smoking stove, only to find his fire out and his chamber cheerless.

Shoving his aching feet into slippers, he got himself into a smoking jacket, lit his pipe and descended to the library. The library lay back of the living room, far from the music, and it contained an inviting couch, at which Merriwether had looked longingly, but had not found time so far to occupy.

He pushed aside the curtains at the entrance with a broad sweep of his hand and stepped within. Then he stopped abruptly. The couch was occupied. "I beg your pardon, Gertrude. I thought you were singing."

"Singing?" she responded crossly, struggling into a sitting posture. "Why, I've not a shred of voice left to sing with!" She did not smile, but passed her hand across her eyes in a gesture which caused a great light to break in on Merriwether.

"You're tired?" he accused in a ringing voice of triumph.

She leaned back, resting her head against the wall. "Tired?" she repeated in an intense voice. "I'm half dead with the awful pace of these two days. If I were a big healthy man now, I glancing resentfully at the proportions of the man before her, "I might be able to endure everything and yet feel fresh, but, being a woman and forty-one—"

"Gertrude," interrupted Merriwether in a tone of solemn joy, "are you forty-one?"

"Of course I am," she responded almost irritably. "You know that I am."

"Ye-es," he replied vaguely, coming nearer, "but I didn't know that you knew it!"

"I have every reason to know it!"—the tears were near the surface now—"when skating gives me the rheumatism, and dancing the headache, and that sleigh ride!" She spread her hands out in a gesture of despair. "I can't endure it any longer. I'm going home tomorrow on the 9-10 train and leave you to chaperon. Nothing seems to tire you." The tears had reached her lashes, and she turned her head away.

Merriwether sat down beside her uninvited. "Gertrude," he began in a voice in which rang a satisfaction out of harmony with his announcement, "the exertion attendant on chaperoning this house party and keeping up with you has given me the rheumatism in every joint and muscle, and not only the headache—the effect has penetrated to my disposition, which is—"

A door opened somewhere, and a burst of music interrupted him. "Peace on earth, good will to men."

The door closed, and silence reigned in the library. A realization of the spirit of the words came to Merriwether. His light manner dropped from him. He leaned over and laid his hand on Gertrude's. "Let's be old and peaceful together, dear. Don't go back tomorrow. Spend Christmas here—with me."

The firelight played softly over the woman's face. She glanced up with a smile which was tremulous in spite of her mocking words. "Now that I think of it, Bruce, I haven't bought my ticket yet, and—it is more comfortable to be old."

She paused and looked back.
watched his chance when the attention of the others, especially Gertrude, was directed elsewhere, and then, assisting his pedal extremities laboriously over the side of the sleigh, he fell on them heavily, trusting to luck rather than to his tired legs to keep him upright.

Near the end of their climb he remarked to Mrs. Angell, with all the nonchalance he could command, "I should think you ladies would be a bit tired."

A light laugh put him to shame, and a pair of dancing blue eyes met his in a glance which stripped him of fifteen years and led him back to the days when he had walked beside her with never a thought of fatigue, "Tired!" she returned carelessly. "And by such a little trip as this?"

That reply, coupled with the day's unparalleled exertions, turned the tide of Merriwether's resolutions. In his room before dinner he eased his aching bones in a morris chair and determined to return to the city early next morning. He would be old and sensible and comfortable once more. He would forget Gertrude as long as he could not keep up with her youthfulness.

But alas for his determination! He nearly forgot his bruises and sprains that evening in the charm of Mrs. Angell's presence, and he noticed, too, with a pang of something very like jealousy, that Briggs, the youngest man in the party, occupied his spare moments looking in her direction.

GROWTH OF TREES.

An Inch in Four Years Is the Fastest Known.

An inch in four years is the swiftest growth known in the race of trees. Farmers and fruit growers are said to have no reliable unit rule to govern them in knowing how long it takes for a tree to grow an inch, but some carriage makers have found out. They ask about forty of the country's prominent vehicle and wheel manufacturers drawing their stock from territory where hickory, white oak, ash and tulip trees grow to select and express to them short cross sections of these woods from the odds and ends about their shops. These were to be selected for the average width of growth, and the size of each block was to be about one inch lengthwise, one inch across and a fourth of an inch thick.

They examined these blocks carefully and marked on each block a one-inch space across the average size of growth of the annual rings. They then counted the number of rings within the inch space on each block and registered the total in ink thereon. Then they counted these totals on all the samples of each of the several kinds of timber submitted and in the usual way thus ascertained the average number of years required for each kind of tree to grow one inch.

The Emancipation Of the Chaperons.

By ALICE LOUISE LEE.

Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee.

"HUH!" Merriwether stretched his legs out luxuriously in front of the grate and puffed at his pipe. "A Christmas house party at the Pines." Then after a pause, "Who are invited?" His nephew leaned against the mantelpiece and stuffed his hands into his pockets as he enumerated the guests, the uncle keeping up a running and caustic comment:

"Engaged—going to be—introduced for matrimonial purposes—engaged—the same." The enumeration ceased. "Yes, I see myself helping to chaperon your house party. I stroll into the reception room and stumble over an engaged couple. I sneak into the library and am frowned out again by newly introduced couple. I bang into the music room and overhear a proposal. No, thank you, Roy; I shall spend Christmas in peace and my own room."

Roy picked up his hat and moved toward the door. "Modern house parties are not conducted along the lines you've laid down, uncle. Change your mind and judge for yourself." He turned the knob. "By the way, I didn't mention the other chaperon, did I? It's Mrs. Angell, Bertha's widowed aunt, you know." With this parting shot, which he knew was effective, Roy discreetly retreated.

After he had gone Merriwether sat an hour staring at the fire and pulling away at a smokeless pipe. Then he arose and looked earnestly at himself in the mantel mirror. "We're apt to run down," he apostrophized his reflection; "apt to run to seed, we bachelors. Now, this tie—let's see, it's six months out of style, and Gertrude used to be—hum." He stepped to the phone and called up his tailor, realizing that his mind had already undergone the change Roy hoped for.

Ten days later he arrived at The Pines just in time to dress for dinner. He was accompanied by a man and a smart lot of luggage, accessories which made so marked a change in his appearance that when at 6 o'clock he descended to the lower hall Bertha Monroe, awaiting her aunt at the foot of the stairs, surveyed him in delighted amazement.

"Why, Uncle Bruce," she exclaimed, "you look so fine I scarcely knew you!" Bertha was his nephew's fiancée and already claimed relationship in private to the uncle. "I'd make Roy wear evening clothes in the morning if he had such a splendid figure—so filled out, you know."

Merriwether, following her into the living room, laughed grimly at the doubtful compliment. "Oh, he'll tip the scales at 220 soon enough, don't worry!"

"You surely don't look that stout," began Bertha and, turning abruptly toward the entrance, finished with, "Does he, auntie?"

Gertrude Angell swept past her niece and met Merriwether's outstretched hand cordially. "Look? Why, he looks surprisingly like the Bruce Merriwether I used to know so well."

"Fifteen years ago," was on the end of Merriwether's tongue, but he checked himself just in time. Gertrude probably ignored lapses in time as women have a habit of doing, he thought. But surely hers was a face, a form, a bearing, which had so successfully withstood time as to entitle her to the appellation of youth. Her brown hair had not lost its luster, nor had her blue eyes lost aught of their sparkling interest in life, while she carried herself with her old-time spring and vivacity.

Merriwether noted all these things as he sat opposite her at dinner. His memory flashed picture after picture before him—the primary days in their old home school, their grammar room betrothal, the warm friendship of later years, which had meant something more to him; then her marriage and life abroad. As he looked at her he had the uncomfortable feeling that, although her birth had antedated his by one year, she was many years his junior.

He was just characterizing himself as "old" when his nephew's voice aroused him and added point to his reflection. "Tomorrow morning we skate," announced Roy joyfully. "I've had the pond back here cleared for action, and the ice is O. K." Then he added carelessly, "By the way, Uncle Bruce, I forgot to tell you to bring skates along, but I can easily provide you with a pair."

Merriwether quaked inwardly, but made no reply until after dinner, when he backed his nephew into a corner and addressed him privately and forcefully. "I've not been on skates for ten years, and I don't intend to make a spectacle of myself now by any means."

"Why, uncle—er—you know, that makes things rather awkward, for Mrs. Angell does all those things so well, and—er—we don't want her to feel bored here."

"Oh!" groaned Merriwether. "In that case I'll try, but watch out for a repetition of a chapter in the 'Pickwick Papers!' and he turned abruptly into the ballroom.

"Are you looking over the scene of former triumphs?" asked a gay voice beside him. And Mrs. Angell moved across the room to straighten a candle in one of the candelabra.

Merriwether noted with admiration her free, light step. She was a superb specimen of womanhood, but he fervently wished she had appeared older. "Why is it," he asked impulsively, ignoring her question, "that women retain their youth so much longer than men?"

She paused with her hand on the candle and looked back. "I think," she replied thoughtfully, "it's because they insist on doing youthful things."

"There it is again!" he thought, with an internal groan. He was obliged to skate and dance and do all the other uncomfortable things which forty years and 220 pounds shrink from. Still as he watched her move about the room the burden of it did not seem so onerous after all.

Therefore he danced not badly, but laboriously, all the while admiring the graceful ease of Gertrude Angell's motions.

"At least," he determined resolutely, "I'll not be caught skating, as I was dancing, without a bit of practice." It was 1 a. m. when he made this resolution and issued the command to his man, "Peter, get me up at 7—unless, in sudden inspiration, 'it should be storming.'"

Promptly at 7 he was awakened in a rebellious frame of mind. "Stiff as a cart horse," he grumbled. "I hope it's snowing like blazes."

The man raised the shade and looked out. "Sky clear as a whistle, sir."

So, with his sleep cut short two hours at both ends of the night, Merriwether dragged himself and the pair of skates, produced by his thoughtful nephew, out to the pond behind the hill. For an hour he skinned his knees, bumped his head and disturbed the equanimity of his temper before he was able to move alone with moderate speed and keep his feet under him.

When he went in to breakfast he was thankful for a few moments alone in front of a glowing grate fire. He stretched his aching legs toward the heat and rubbed the back of his head where a bump was appearing which he attributed to the phonological charts and palms from which were darting in every direction. He listened idly to voices in the hall until his attention was chained by two comments made just outside the door.

"Isn't she a perfect delight of a chaperon? And so young too! She can't be thirty."

The reply was given in a doubtful tone. "Why—e-e, yes, she must be all of thirty."

"Forty-one," muttered the listener doggedly, the light of his new resolve shining again in his eyes.

At 10 o'clock the entire party went out to the pond, and Merriwether skated and skated and skated until his teeth were clinched in desperation and his forehead knitted in his efforts to hold out as long as Mrs. Angell did.

That he was becoming a man of one idea he acknowledged to himself that afternoon on the sleigh ride. "What Gertrude dares, I dare," he told himself in feeble jest. That sleighing party was a nightmare to him for days afterward. The drifts were deep, and the sleigh was overturned again and again, generally with Merriwether at the bottom of the heap, owing to the fact that sleighs incline readily in the direction of 220 pounds. "To vary the monotony of the tip-overs, there were miles of hillslides with a southerly exposure where the sun had melted the snow and obliged the party to walk."

Merriwether toiled up the slopes, hussling his wind by maintaining silence, watching Gertrude's elastic steps nimbly and feeling his resolutions in respect to youthfulness ooze from his chilled finger tips.

"All out for our last climb!" cried Roy as the horses stopped at the foot of a steep rise. "This is our last hill."

"Thank the Lord!" said Merriwether devoutly behind his mustache. He watched his chance when the attention of the others, especially Gertrude, was directed elsewhere, and then, assisting his pedal extremities laboriously over the side of the sleigh, he fell on them heavily, trusting to luck rather than to his tired legs to keep him up right.

Near the end of their climb he remarked to Mrs. Angell, with all the nonchalance he could command, "I should think you ladies would be a bit tired."

A light laugh put him to shame, and a pair of dancing blue eyes met his in a glance which stripped him of fifteen years and led him back to the days when he had walked beside her with never a thought of fatigue, "Tired?" she returned carelessly. "And by such a little trip as this!"

"That reply, coupled with the day's unparalleled exertions, turned the tide of Merriwether's resolutions. In his room before dinner he eased his aching bones in a morris chair and determined to return to the city early next morning. He would be old and sensible and comfortable once more. He would forget Gertrude as long as he could not keep up with her youthfulness.

But alas for his determination! He nearly forgot his bruises and sprains that evening in the charm of Mrs. Angell's presence, and he noticed, too, with a pang of something very like jealousy, that Briggs, the youngest man in the party, occupied his spare moments looking in her direction.

"I'll see what the weather promises for tomorrow," was his irresolute comment as he reached his room at midnight and noted that Peter had obediently packed his things ready for the 9:10 train. "If it should storm, maybe"—was his last conscious thought, and then he drifted off into a land where Gertrude spent her Christmases with him beside a quiet hearstone and chaperoned house parties no more.

Next morning, when he awoke, the snow was driving against the window, while the wind whistled savagely through the trees. Merriwether turned over with a deep grunt of satisfaction. There could be no sleighing, no skating, no tobogganing, such a day as this, and that night was Christmas eve and the Christmas tree. He had purchased an exquisite copy of "Maud" for Mrs. Angell. It was a poem they had once read together, and he wondered if his memory of the fact would touch her. With these thoughts he drifted back into sleep, and the morning train went thundering cityward without him.

But his triumph over the state of the weather was short lived. At the breakfast table his nephew curdled his blood by the announcement of the plans for the Christmas trees, which yet stood in the forest a mile across lots. "Two of the men are sick this morning, fellows, so we'll have to fall into line and fetch the trees," Roy proclaimed, with a relish born of twenty-three years and warm blood.

The "fellows," including Merriwether, worked in the storm until noon before the trees were properly cut, trimmed, cleaned and set up in the ballroom ready for the decorations and gifts. The ladies had the decorations in charge, but Merriwether found there was no rest for the weary. He balanced himself perilously by the hour on the top of stepladders, which swayed and creaked ominously under his weight; he climbed stairs to fetch packages from the billiard room; he searched for lost hammers and knelt on matted tacks until he relegated Christmas and house parties to the lower regions.

At last the trees were decorated, and Roy called the party into the music room to practice Christmas anthems. Merriwether saw his fellow workers safely into the music room; then he dragged himself upstairs for a sojourn in the library, where he found a note pinned to the door, which told him that Mrs. Angell had not found time so far to occupy.

He pushed aside the curtains at the entrance with a broad sweep of his hand and stepped within. Then he stopped abruptly. The couch was occupied. "I beg your pardon, Gertrude, I thought you were singing."

"Singing?" she responded crossly, struggling into a sitting posture. "Why, I've not a shred of voice left to sing with!" She did not smile, but passed her hand across her eyes in a gesture which caused a great light to break in on Merriwether.

"You're tired?" he accused in a ringing voice of triumph.

She leaned back, resting her head against the wall. "Tired?" she repeated in an intense voice. "I'm half dead with the awful pace of these two days. If I were a big healthy man now, I'd glance resentfully at the proportions of the man before me, 'I might be able to endure everything and yet feel fresh, but, being a woman and forty-one—'"

"Gertrude," interrupted Merriwether in a tone of solemn joy, "are you forty-one?"

"Of course I am," she responded almost irritably. "You know that I am."

"Ye-es," he replied vaguely, coming nearer, "but I didn't know that you knew it!"

"I have every reason to know it!" the tears were near the surface now—"when skating gives me the rheumatism, and dragging the headache, and that sleigh ride!" She spread her hands out in a gesture of despair. "I can't endure it any longer. I'm going home tomorrow on the 9:10 train and leave you to chaperon. Nothing seems to tire you." The tears had reached her lashes, and she turned her head away.

Merriwether sat down beside her uninvited. "Gertrude," he began in a voice in which rang a satisfaction out of harmony with his announcement, "the exertion attendant on chaperoning this house party and keeping up with you has given me the rheumatism in every joint and muscle, and not only the headache—the effect has penetrated to my disposition, which is!"

A door opened somewhere, and a burst of music interrupted him. "Peace on earth, good will to men."

The door closed, and silence reigned in the library. A realization of the spirit of the words came to Merriwether. His light manner dropped from him. He leaned over and laid his hand on Gertrude's. "Let's be old and peaceful together, dear. I don't go back tomorrow. Spend Christmas here—with me."

The firelight played softly over the woman's face. She glanced up with a smile which was tremulous in spite of her mocking words. "Now that I think of it, Bruce, I haven't bought my ticket yet, and—it is more comfortable to be old!"

Visitor—And what's this? Host—That's our new burglar alarm. Isn't it fine? I feel perfectly safe now.

Visitor—But why don't you have it in your bedroom? You can't possibly hear it down here in the basement.

Host—I know, but if we had it in our room, it would wake the baby. Cleveland Leader.

MORE WEALTH FROM ALASKA

Not Gold Alone, but Furs Also Belong to Resources of That Territory.

In our eager search after figures which represent money, we are all too apt to forget any of the figures representing the wealth of Alaska which represent anything else save gold. We know that they catch salmon in Alaska, but even at that we have very little idea that the amount of that catch is one of the principal figures in the salmon market of the world, and we almost entirely overlook the fact that the fur catch of Alaska is still one of its greatest resources. One sealing schooner in Alaskan waters has recently brought down twenty-eight skins of the sea otter—a valuable prize which they were not seeking—but one which is becoming so rare in the world that they are worth, on the average, about $1,000 each.—Seattle Times.
